Normandie Ablaze In New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.— (BUP)—Authorities said at 4 p.m. New York time that about 500 workmen may have been trapped below decks on the starboard side of the burning liner Normandie. Rescue workers began cutting through the side of the ship in an attempt to rescue them.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(BUP)—A four-alarm fire broke out this afternoon on the big transport Lafayette —formerly the French luxury liner Normandie.

Flames quickly enveloped the super-structure of the 60-million-dollar vessel.

There is no early indication as to how the fire started.

One unofficial estimate is that 10 persons have been injured.

ORIGIN NOT INDICATED

There was no indication how the fire started.

Some 2,500 workmen were reported aboard the ship when the fire broke out but most of them were believed to have been saved, some of them by firemen who raised extension ladders to the towering bow of the liner.

Every available piece of fire apparatus along the west side of Manhattan, fireboats, special police details and detectives from the bomb and sabotage squads raced to the scene as soon as the fire was reported—about 3 p.m.

Four alarms were sounded and men and apparatus stretched for blocks along the waterfront.

Some officials feared that some of the workmen aboard may have been drowned in their frantic efforts to get off the ship.

Eye-witnesses said hundreds made dramatic escapes, leaping to the dock, sliding down ropes, and even lowering some of the remaining lifeboats into the water.

INFLAMMABLE MATERIAL

Other spectators reported that the first flames were seen from the promenade deck, extending astern over an area of more than 30 feet. A large quantity of inflammable material was reported to have been taken aboard the liner and it was believed the fire may have started in it.

Office workers in nearby skyscrapers hurried to fire hoses alongside pouring a stream against the side of the vessel. Smoke clouded one waterfront where a number of freighters were tied up.

Soon after the fire started an eye-witness said brisk winds momentarily cleared the smoke and flames could be seen "all over the ship."

Army Training For Men Up To 35 Years Seen

OTTAWA, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Extension of compulsory military training to men up to 35 years of age instead of 26, as at present, was seen by informed quarters Sunday night as a logical sequel to announcements of a new reserve army set-up which restricts voluntary enlistments to men under 19 and over 35.

In the new voluntary enlistment regulations for the reserve army, authorities noted what they called a "significant gap" in ages covered. Highest age class now required to give compulsory military service is 36 years and lowest of the older age brackets eligible for voluntary enlistment in the reserve is 35.

DESIRABLE AGE

"This leaves men from 26 to 35 with no positive allocation," one source said. "It would seem logical that sooner or later they will become liable for compulsory military training because men of these ages might be considered as among the best prospects for active service."

Extension of the call for compulsory military training for home defence to embrace single men and childless widowers up to 45 less; 30 years and possibly to 35 was forecast as early as last Nov. 15 in authoritative quarters.

At that time War Services Min-

Religion May Become Part School Course

Legislation to provide compulsory religious instruction in Alberta is likely to be introduced at the present session of the legislature, it was learned in reliable quarters on Monday.

While optional religious teaching and prayers are now provided in the School Act, an amendment may be brought in to make this compulsory.

Movement to have this brought about was started in a resolution of the Alberta School Trustees' Association, in convention at Calgary last month. It was urged that passages from the Holy Bible be read following the Lord's Prayer in schools and that the prayer be made compulsory, not permissable, as it now stands.

Members of the Anglican diocese of Calgary, at a synod meeting there last Friday, also passed a resolution calling for Bible reading in Alberta schools, at the opening exercises each day.

Under the School Act at present, a school board may direct that the Lord's Prayer be said at the opening exercises and may also order that the period from 3:30 to 4 p.m. shall be used for religious instruction. It is not compulsory under the act for a student to remain for such instruction.

Violent Anti-British Speeches Are Made By Quebec Candidates

By The Canadian Press

Electors went to the polls in four federal constituencies today after an intensive campaign that featured the conscription issue and saw party splits. Violent anti-British speeches were delivered in Quebec East and Montreal-St. Mary.

Polls in the four ridings opened at 8 a.m., and will close at 7 p.m.

In Quebec East, where Justice Minister St. Laurent is opposed by Paul Bouchard, member of the new Anti-Conscriptionist Canadian Party, the campaign was wound up in a spate of speechmaking.

Mr. St. Laurent, trying to gain a seat that had formerly been held by the two great French-Canadian leaders, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Ernest Lapointe successively, last night explained his position on a government "manpower" committee, recently formed in Ottawa.

DENIES CHARGE

He said he was a member of a committee studying ways to distribute the Dominion's human resources "so as to arrive at a total war effort." He said the committee was not formed to study conscription. His opponents had charged the committee was formed for this purpose.

Another speaker, Robert Laurier, Who Resigned Tuesday as Ontario minister of mines, said he left Premier Hepburn's cabinet because he could not accept Mr. Hepburn's support of Conservative leader Meighen who is running in the York south by-election in Ontario.

Mr. Bouchard, winding up his campaign, predicted he would win the seat because, he said, "we have had enough unproportionate war participation, colonial servitude, because we don't want conscription. . . ."

Quebec Control Of Canada Says Paul Bouchard

QUEBEC, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Paul Bouchard, Canadian party candidate in the Quebec East Dominion by-election today in a campaign speech here Sunday said Canadians should remain at home "to defend our country for which we would gladly give up our lives."

He said that it is "primarily" up to Britain to defend her world-wide interests.

"After the war, the province of Quebec will take control of Canada if we can rally to our cause all Canadians of non-Britannic origin," Mr. Bouchard said. "But first, we must be united ourselves, because a country divided will perish. United, we will be able to play an important role in our country which "will lead to greatness and liberty."

Mr. Bouchard urged his audience to "be firmly resolved that Canada never again be plunged into a foreign war—Canada, one of the largest countries in the North American hemisphere, which," he said, "Still is under the most abject form of colonialism."

Citizens Lose Hour's Sleep As Time Changes

By The Canadian Press

Residents of the United States and citizens in some sections of Canada lost an hour's sleep today when clocks were moving ahead an hour in a move to save electricity for factories producing war materials and to give more daylight for outdoor tasks. The change-over was made at 2 a.m. Standard time and will remain in effect until six months after the war ends.

The new time will be known as "War Time" in the United States and as Daylight Saving Time in Canada. In some parts of Ontario and Quebec, Daylight Saving Time has been in effect since the fall of 1940.

"Faster" times comes to the United States by virtue of congressional enactment and in Canada by order-in-council.

In the United States, however, it can be applied legally only to common carriers, the federal government and the hour at which acts or orders of the federal government are effective. The act makes no specific provisions for either enforcement or penalties.

Bonus Problem Will Confront Civic Meeting

Negotiations between the city commissioners and members of the executive of the Civic Employees' Federation on the question of payment of a cost-of-living bonus to civic employees have failed to reach a proposal satisfactory to both sides, and city council will be asked on Monday night to have the city join with the Federation in submitting the dispute to the regional war labor board for determination.

It is pointed out that the board has no jurisdiction in dealing with municipal corporations and their employees, but it is quite possible that on a joint presentation, the government will agree to let the board act in an advisory capacity, both sides agreeing to accept the award.

NOT ACCEPTED

Employees have asked for cost-of-living wage increases based on the cost of living index increase since the war began, and the city commissioners countered this request with an offer of $2 weekly to married employees or single employees with dependents, and $1 weekly to unmarried employees.

The commissioners' offer was not acceptable to the employees and

Close Games Feature Start Consols' Play

With 14 rinks entered, the Northern Alberta playdowns of the British Consols competition opened at the Royal Club Monday morning and the first round produced results so close that veteran observers behind the glass conceded that the race was as wide open as any Consols series ever held here.

Highlight of the morning was a sensational 14-end victory that Charlie Cairns' Edmonton Club rink chalked up over Fred Kemp's Royals, skipped by Jack McIntyre in the absence of Kemp.

Cairns was leading 9-8 going home on the 12th end, but McIntyre came through with a beautiful shot on his last rock to cut out Cairns' counter and tie the score at 9-9. The 13th end was blank when Cairns, throwing last rock chipped out McIntyre's shot rock but went out himself. On the next end Cairns was able to count one and win.

This is the longest overtime game that has come up in championship curling here for many years. In fact veterans were unable to recall off hand any such marathon struggle in a major competition in Edmonton.

COMPLETE RESULTS

Following are complete results for the 9:00 a.m. draw: Dark 7, Leigh 11; Kemp 9, Cairns 10; Cowley 7, Slavik 15; Manahan 13, Maxwell 12; McLaren 11, Greenough 7; Olsen 11, Kaufman 10.

Play continues this afternoon with two draws scheduled at the Royal.

Landing In Force Made By Enemy

By The Canadian Press

The Japanese fought their way into the fortress isle of Singapore today on a 10-mile front, threatening to overrun the British base, but after several hours of bloody fighting the situation was announced to be "well in hand."

That word came from Maj.-Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett, commander of the Australian forces, in whose zone in the Mandrove, swamps and rubber plantations of the northwestern shore the invaders first struck.

(A Tokyo broadcast recorded by Reuters News Agency today claimed the Japanese invaders of Singapore Island had captured the Tengah airport, about 10 miles northwest of Singapore City.

(Domei News Agency claimed today Japanese troops have started an assault on British positions near the Johore Bahru Causeway and the great naval base on the north shore of Singapore Island.)

"We have taken our stand on a strong line and are organizing an attack which it is hoped will recover as much as possible of the lost terrain," Gen. Bennett said, thus holding out but slim hope that the Japanese could be readily dislodged.

MAN-TO-MAN BATTLE

The strong Japanese landing had turned Singapore's ordeal of shell-fire and bombs during the last week of siege from the opposite shore of Johore strait into a man-to-man, weapon-to-weapon struggle.

The Japanese claimed their beach heads were well consolidated, that tanks had been ferried across to bolster their shock troops.

While the fate of Singapore thus hung in the balance, Japanese airmen, bombing Batavia for the first time, stepped up their air attacks on the Netherlands East Indies—a development taken at Batavia, the capital, to be a prelude to an attempted landing on Java.

Java, principal island of the N.E.I., is the site of the United Nations' headquarters in the southwest Pacific.

The importance of Java's defence was linked also to the Japanese successor on Singapore.

OPEN COUNTER-ATTACK

A London informant said the British forces had opened a sharp counter-attack on the Japanese attacking Singapore Island.

Before Gen. Bennett told of the counter attacks, British headquarters acknowledged that the forces which clinched a beach head dur-

MYSTERIOUS INCIDENTS

Nazis Believed Trying To Bring Spain In War

By CARL CRANMER

NEW YORK, Feb. 9. — (AP)—A chain of mysterious incidents which may have been deliberately engineered to embroil Spain in the war and which certainly bear the imprint of German propaganda pointed sharply today to serious Axis preparations for a push in the Mediterranean.

The latest incident involving Spain, whose territory used by Hitler as a springboard would permit a direct assault on Gibraltar and a move into northwest Africa to threaten South America and the South Atlantic, occurred at Tangier, a former international zone of about 225 square miles about 30 miles southwest of the British fortress rock.

This development coincided with reports from Berne, Switzerland, Sunday that Marshal Petain of France would go to Spain today—presumably to confer with his old pupil, Gen. Francisco Franco.

In Vichy, however, a semi-official denial said the reports originated from confusion over the scheduled visit to Spain of Madame Petain, who will be accompanied by the Marshal's chief civilian collaborator, Denouilin De Labarthere.

GERMANS LAY MINE FIELDS

Russ Launch New Drive On Donets Basin Front

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Feb. 9:—(AP)—Desperately pressed German troops laid vast mine fields in the Donets basin today in an attempt to halt the onrushing Soviets, but the forces of Marshal Timoshenko surged forward over the snowdrifted steppes.

One mine field nearly two miles long was discovered and Red sappers cut five lanes through it. At another point the Russians said they extracted 2,000 anti-tank mines buried beneath the snow. Despite these and other obstacles, the Russians swept three more Donets villages clear of the Nazis.

Eighteen other populated places were captured on the central front as the Reds pressed toward Smolensk. Heavy artillery was said to have destroyed 10 German planes on the ground near the front lines.

On the southwestern front, the Russians said 20 members of the Rumanian 1st Division had surrendered with their junior officers, complaining of treatment from the German command. The Russians said the Rumanian captives fought German prisoners. They complained the German commanders had assured them of artillery and German infantry support which did not materialize.

Today's War Moves

The tenth week of the war in the Pacific promises to be a critical one for the United Nations. Not only does Singapore face the supreme test of its ability to hold out as the last bastion of British strength in the Far East, but the Japanese are giving increasing signs of an early assault on Java.

Now that the Japanese are on the island, Singapore admittedly is in acute peril. The Japanese are determined to take it by storm before that long-promised aid arrives from overseas. Much depends on the ability of the imperial air forces to keep flying, and perhaps to get reinforcements.

The Japanese preceded their assault by days of incessant aerial and artillery bombardment of the

LORD CHATFIELD REVEALS:

Irish Naval Bases Handed To Eire As Diplomatic Move

British People Fed Up On "Free Ride" Policy Operated By De Valera

By HELEN KIRKPATRICK

Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Daily News and The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Lord Chatfield, First Lord of the Admiralty in 1938, reveals for the first time today that the Admiralty did not object to handing over the Southern Irish bases to Eire because the growing hostility of the Irish people would have necessitated considerable military force to hold the bases in wartime.

Every since Neville Chamberlain in his appeasement mood handed the bases over to Eire's premier, Eamon De Valera, in 1938, there has been bitter controversy over the subject. Americans of the late prime minister insist that he and De Valera had an unwritten gentlemen's agreement that if war came the ports would be put at the disposal of the British under Mr. Chamberlain, but De Valera emphatically denies that any such agreement was ever made.

Kirkpatrick

Critics of the Chamberlain government have insisted that the prime minister, seeking to appease the Irish by evacuating British forces from Eire completely disregarded the advice of the Admiralty and overrode their objections. That, Chatfield says in a letter to the London Times today, is not true.

EXCLUSIVE

"Hostility in Eire to the occupation of these ports by United Kingdom was increasing and it was obvious that unless we were willing and able to hold them by military force they would be useless for naval purposes," Chatfield explains. Furthermore, he says, it had been hoped that the improved atmospheric and relations resulting from Britain's handing over of the ports would offer the prospect that the latter would use the ports with Eire's consent.

U-BOAT DETECTION

The admiralty, he admits, had not considered the possibility of France's collapsing and of Hitler's upon improved devices for U-boat detection to compensate for the loss of the southern bases.

Chatfield apologizes for arguing the matter in public today but a question raised in parliament required his answer, he states. This apology indicates that tremendous moral pressure is being exerted by the British government to prevent any discussion of Ireland from being raised. If the government is successful members of parliament are persuaded not to ask questions concerning Ireland since the British people are pretty thoroughly fed up with what they consider De Valera's "Free ride attitude." Public discussions are only likely to inflame feelings, the government believes.

There is no doubt that the British people have little patience any more for the Irish although the people, as distinct from the government, have formerly been sympathetic to the Irish cause. They see Irish unemployed coming over here still at the rate of 1,000 weekly and getting highly paid jobs while Britons are in the fighting services. They know that Irish farmers receive the same price for products as Australian and Canadian farmers although shipping distances are many times greater for the latter. And they call this "Ireland's free ride."

"The United States seemed to think the presence of Axis diplomats in South America dangerous and yet, if we suggested that Dublin clear Axis diplomats from there, we would be accused of brutality, interference and aggression. Everyone knows the borders are wide open and the Axis in Dublin receives all kinds of information."

Those are the views of the average Englishman and particularly, it should be stressed, of those who in the past have been the greatest champions of Irish independence.

AXIS IN DUBLIN

American correspondents recently in northern Ireland, at the time of the United States troops' arrival, and subsequently in Dublin, can testify to the impossibility of preventing the knowledge of what is happening in the north from reaching Dublin. And in Dublin are the German and Italian legations and the Japanese consulate, the latter, oddly enough, only opened after 1939.

Official statistics show that no Japanese ships were entering Eire ports before or since the war. Irish imports from Japan, amounting in 1937 to 517,000 pounds ($2,068,000), declined by 200,000 pounds ($800,000) in 1938, while Irish exports to Japan fell from 1,000 pounds ($4,000) in 1937 to nothing in 1938. What the consulate does which ordinary consulates do, is obscure.

ing the night on the northwest coast were spreading eastward despite the fierce defence.

A communique pictured the defenders as straining to the utmost to "mop up the enemy."

Japanese artillery on the Malayan mainland, a fifteen-hour away, and Japanese dive bombers helped blast a path for the advancing Japanese.

Other raiders appeared over Singapore City, on the southern side of the island, but these were met by British fighters which destroyed three planes, probably destroyed three more, and damaged 13.

The Tokyo radio pictured the defenders as flights along the highways leading toward the southern part of the island.

One report said the first landing was signalled at 12:18 a.m. with a green flare which was followed in four minutes by a red flare to signify the completion of that operation.

The Japanese estimated the defending forces at 20,000 men.

More trustworthy indications were that at least 60,000 men were on Singapore to oppose the headlong rush by the Japanese troops who had pushed the length of the Malayan mainland to Johore Strait since the start of the war in the Pacific.

In the battle of Bataan, Gen. MacArthur announced that his men had repulsed new Japanese assaults while the American guns in Manila Bay silenced several sieke batteries on the Cavite shore to the south.

Once again the Washington war department communique was a story of all attacks repulsed, despite the dive bombers which roared the skies in blasting support of the invader aground.

STALLED IN BURMA

Reports from Rangoon, target of the Japanese Burma attack and gateway to the Burma Road supply line to China, indicated the Japanese drive was stalled and possibly broken in in northern Burma.

Chinese fighters and fresh Indian troops gave new strength to the British forces on the Salween river front and the United Nations were encouraged by the "reasoned optimism" expressed by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, Allied commander in the southwest Pacific, after a recent visit to Burma.

Gen. Wavell flew from Java headquarters for a visit on the Moulmein front with Lt.-Gen. T. J. Hutton, British commander in Burma.

for conscription. The party he had founded was against conscription, he charged that "Quebec isolationists" were the cause of what he described as "Mackenzie King's appeasement policy and we're getting a very clear insight as to what section of Canada is loyal to the British Empire at this time." He said that opposition from Quebec led to Mr. King's refusal of a British government offer to establish an air training plan and munitions industries in Canada in 1937.

Rev. R. G. Ekhart of London, speaking in Mr. Watt's behalf, predicted an invasion of Canada by the Japanese and said "if the government keeps to its present policy of appeasement" a puppet government would be set up in Ottawa under Mr. King.

At Welland Lt.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, also speaking in the interests of Mr. Watt, recalled that Ralston-Mackenzie Ministers Howe that there was no urgency over the question of conscription and asked: "If there is no urgency, why are we having a plebiscite at all?"

He also said that the Canadian military establishment at Camp Borden is not filled "simply because the administration is unable to maintain the forces it has mobilized."

"FREE FROM BRITAIN"

QUEBEC, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Fisheries Minister Michaud told a political meeting Saturday night that by March, 1943, Canada will be "financially and economically" free from Britain.

"We will have furnished enough provisions and arms by that time to pay off all debts that Canada owed to British capital," Mr. Michaud said. He spoke in support of Justice Minister St. Laurent, official Liberal candidate in the Dominion by-election for Quebec East, Feb. 9.

Being financially and economically free from Britain will mean, Mr. Michaud said, that "we will be free to find markets where we wish. We will no longer have to import from Britain things that our own workers can produce here."

Robert Laurier, who resigned Thursday as Ontario minister of mines, told the rally that he gave up his post "not only because I am a Liberal but particularly because I am a Canadian.

"If I left Premier Hepburn it was because I could not accept seeing him support the Conservative Party of Mr. Meighen."

Justice Minister St. Laurent said that he is a member of a committee which has been formed in Ottawa to study distribution of the Dominion's human resources in the "to arrive at a total war effort".

"This committee," he said, "has not been formed to study conscription but to find out how much manpower is missing from farms and from industries. When the committee finished its work no one will have to complain that he, working only a few hours a day or a few hours a week.

SAYS KING, MEIGHEN "FOR CONSCRIPTION"

MONTREAL, Feb. 8. — (CP) — Ligouri Lacombe, member of the House of Commons for Laval-Two Mountains, addressing a meeting in the interests of his Canadian Party" candidate in the Montreal-St. Mary's by-election here last night, said that both Prime Minister King and Conservative leader Meighen were for conscription.

He urged the electors to support his party's candidate, Raoul Perillard and the party itself "which will bring unity, peace and prosperity to Canada."

He said that Mr. King was closely linked with "financial interests who sold metal to Germany, metal which has been used to kill our Canadian boys in Hong Kong."

Mr. Perillard said that if he were elected he would support Mr. Lacombe and help him fight "any attempt on the part of the King government to introduce legislation which would oblige the youth of Canada to fight overseas."

Army Training For Men Up To 35 Years Seen

later Thorson said it appeared likely any extension of the call-up to higher age groups would be associated with drafting on a selective basis.

This would mean that all age groups liable to service would provide a part of the manpower to the extent to which the national defence department decided it had training facilities available.

SELECTIVE BASIS

It had been stated that facilities have been available for the training of 10,000 a month in previous predictions that the call-up age would be extended it was predicted men might be called on a selective basis, extending over a wider age-range than heretofore but actually bringing no more men to the colors for each call-up.

These training facilities could be expanded.

National registration during August, 1940, established that there were 800,000 single men and childless widowers in Canada between 19 and 45 years of age. Those 21 to 45 could all be called under the National Resources Mobilization Act if it were deemed necessary.

However, military authorities have taken the view that men under 35 years are to be preferred for the most strenuous tasks of modern war.

West Business Outlook Bright

A. E. R. Long, Calgary, western Canada commissioner for the Federation of British Industries Ltd., London, arrived in the city Monday to confer with H. W. Nock, manager of the firm's Edmonton branch.

Mr. Long stated that business last year increased considerably here and in Western Canada generally and that there is much reason to believe that returns in 1942 will exceed last year's record.

The federation handles nearly as much British goods at the present time as it did prior to the war, Mr. Long said. Difficulty is being experienced in getting some materials, but that is not a greater hardship on their firm than it is on any other, he explained.

Optimism in regard to business prospects for 1942 was expressed because of closer connections with the United States since that nation has entered the war, Mr. Long stated.

Mr. Long will return to Calgary Monday evening.

Irvine Attacks Capitalist Plan

Describing capitalistic democracy as the worst of the three different economic systems represented in the present conflict, and declaring that it hampers the war effort by refusing to put every resource into the struggle, William Irvine, provincial C.C.F. organizer, addressed a C.C.F. forum in the Moose Hall Sunday night.

Speaking on "War by Revolution or Revolution by War", Mr. Irvine contended that capitalistic democracy had not only been spurned by both Nazism and Socialism as incompetent and unjust but was also spurned by the people who live under a capitalistic regime.

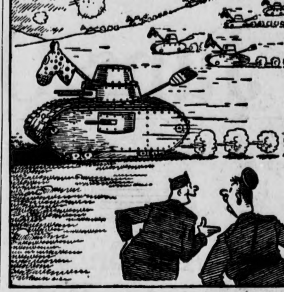

He said that there are only two conceivable ends to the present war. These are Nazism as the dominating force of the world or socialism with a super-national socialist government.

island's defences and air fields. They engaged the defending planes in constant action. The softening up process completed, they attacked.

The resulting battle is likely to exceed in ferocity anything that took place on the Malay peninsula. The Imperial defenders, numbering perhaps 50,000 are concentrated in the defences of the island, which have been feverishly strengthened in the past two months. The Japanese infiltration tactics, used successfully on the peninsula, should not prove as easy. There is, however, the danger of massed parachute descents which would accomplish the same purpose. The defending air force probably could not prevent it.

WATER SUPPLY

In landing in the northwestern part of the island, the Japanese are only a few miles from the municipal water catchment area, Singapore's only remaining source of supply If the Japanese can battle their way eastward and occupy the two big reservoirs the garrison and the civilian population augmented by thousands of refugees would be in a bad way and might have to capitulate.

While they are making their big assault on Singapore, the Japanese have not lessened their pressure on the wide front of the southwest Pacific. They have loosened an all-out attack on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's valiant little band on Luzon and are battering at Java in apparent preparation for a landing.

Nothing further has been heard of the invasion fleet which was reported last week to be steaming southward along the China coast, but it would be surprising to find it moving soon through the strait between Borneo and Sumatra towards Java. The aerial bombardment of Banka Island in the strait of Batavia and Soerabaja, would be preliminary to its arrival. The Japanese are probably making better preparations than they did in the Strait of Macassar, where their transport losses were heavy.

If the Japanese can get a solid foothold on Java, they will be well on their way to conquest of the entire Indian group, with its wealth of war materials.

Special tradesmen rates of pay will go to those who qualify.

the matter was referred to a previous council meeting. At that time the question was referred back to the city commissioners with instructions to review negotiations with the executive of the Civic Employees' Federation, and also that the commissioners bring to city council detailed reports on the increased costs in each civic department of the two proposals.

Council will deal also with a request from representatives of Air-Craft Repair Ltd., for transportation facilities to the plant at the Edmonton airport. Company officials have intimated there will be a considerable increase in the number of persons employed at the plant this spring when the addition to the plant is completed.

SPECIAL SERVICE

In their report to city council the city commissioners intimate that no definite arrangement was agreed upon regarding street railway service, but it is evident that a special service may have to be given to the company's plant and that a special fare may have to be charged.

In view of the possibility of having to provide this special service the commissioners have instructed that the city solicitor prepare an amendment to the city's charter to permit the charging of a special street car or bus fare, and ask for council's approval of their action.

The commissioners seek also the reduction to one year as the residence period necessary to qualify for civic employment. Previously the residence period was two years, but the commissioners point out that this provision was established to combat a tendency of people to come to the city to obtain residence for the purpose of receiving relief. This condition no longer exists, it is pointed out in the commissioners' report.

Several other routine matters are scheduled for disposal.

Woman Given 4-Month Term Theft Charge

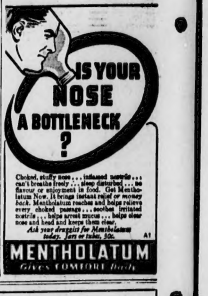

Found guilty in supreme court Monday by Mr. Justice G. B. O'Connor on a charge of stealing $2,100 from L. Marsh, Neiherhill, Sask., cattle buyer, Mrs. June Springsteel, Edmonton, was sentenced to serve four months in Fort Saskatchewan jail. Defence Counsel Hugh Calais Macdonald, K.C., intimated an appeal would be taken from conviction.

At the conclusion of the trial, A. W. Miller, K.C., acting on behalf of Mr. Marsh, applied to the court for a compensation award for his client. He made the application under the criminal code provisions that permit the awarding of compensation up to $1,000 to a complainant for damage sustained through an accused person's action. By consent of counsel the hearing of Mrs. Marsh's application was adjourned until the appeal against conviction has been determined.

UNEXPLAINED PHENOMENA

Even today, science is not sure just how the process of caterpillar turns into butterflies takes place. It is one of the most wonderful phenomena in the world of nature.

THIS IS HOW. Total renewal premiums paid by Canada Life policyholders last year on all policies and annuities amounted to $23,229,466.00.

In Canada, the Canada Life purchased during 1941 over $12,000,000.00 of Canadian government war bonds.

In the British Isles, the Canada Life subscribed $5,200,000.00 to British war loans.

In the United States, the Canada Life purchased more than $7,000,000.00 of new United States government bonds.

In total, the Canada Life purchased during 1941—and still holds—$24,200,000.00 of government bonds, an amount which would pay for almost 75,000 Bren guns.

Thus, the company's investment in government war and defense bonds during the year was greater than its entire renewal premium income.

WAR HAS EFFECT ON JUVENILES

Britain's Delinquency Experience Is Aid To Others

Grim Lesson Is Taught As War Causes Break In Young People's Morale

This is the second of two articles on juvenile crime in wartime Britain by William H. Stoneman, correspondent for the Chicago Daily News and The Edmonton Bulletin.—EDITOR.

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN

Copyright, 1942, by the Chicago Daily News and The Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The United States, in the estimate of British experts, can prevent the increase of juvenile delinquency in wartime if it can profit by several grim lessons learned by wartime England.

American youth probably will not be faced by the temptations of the blackout—bombed stores and houses. Night after night and month after month of shelter life, with all its sordid results, probably will not be necessary. Children will not be evacuated to strange surroundings where emotional distress can ruin their equilibrium.

EXCLUSIVE

Those things have all gone far to send juvenile delinquency in Britain soaring. But Britain in the confusion of war time, has made certain mistakes which have also played a part and which may do the same in the United States unless Britain's lessons are learned and used. British experience dictates the following "don'ts" to Americans.

Stoneman

DON'T CLOSE SCHOOLS

1—Don't close schools anywhere if you can help it. Don't call up school teachers for service or let them enlist; expand instead of cutting down on normal educational facilities.

2—Don't close any clubs or other recreation centers. Increase activities of such organizations as Knights of Columbus, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., and of all settlements and playgrounds. A good Boy Scout or Y.M.C.A., leader or a good playground supervisor can do more for his country by sticking to his job than by trying to learn to fire a rifle.

3—Avoid the breakup of families by conscripting fathers for military service or mothers for industry. If it is necessary to conscript them or to allow them to enlist be sure that every child has some responsible relative or friend to care for him.

4—Don't throw an army of youngsters into industry and out that way, and limit the amount of cash paid to young people employed in industry.

Much of Britain's rise in juvenile crime and delinquency has been due to the disruption of school life and resulting "officially sanctioned truancy." Even where schools have continued to operate in safe areas, systems have been disorganized by calling up capable teachers for active service.

It is natural for the more red-blooded type of teacher to try to enlist and in this country he was allowed to do so. It was a sad mistake and one for which this country will pay for a generation.

British youth attends to a large extent upon voluntary clubs where youngsters who work can find wholesome entertainment in the evenings. Because nobody in the government had worked the thing out beforehand, the government at the war's outbreak suddenly embarked on the wholesale and disastrous policy of commandeering club premises and calling up or enlisting the people who had been responsible for running them. The result is that hundreds of these clubs have gone completely out of action and that thousands of children, who depended upon them for recreation, have had to find it in other ways.

NOT PERSONS FOR JOB

Another result, which is still not realized fully by many people, is that clubs and organizations which are still running are largely staffed either by physical misfits or pacifists. Some of the latter are doing splendid work and encouraging those under their supervision to cooperate in cadet units organized by the government. But most of them are not exactly the type to command the respect and co-operation of wartime children.

The result is that thousands of children who should be granted proper recreational facilities, have been turned out onto the streets.

This situation is now being corrected by the development of a great system of youth centers throughout the country. Yet everybody admits that the situation should not ever have arisen and that it certainly could be prevented from arising in the United States.

It is estimated that 75 per cent of all British juvenile delinquents come from "broken homes" and one of Britain's greatest difficulties in dealing with the youth problem has been created by the wholesale breaking of homes through conscription of parents.

Without knowing the statistics, British social workers believe that a sensible apportionment of fighting duties to people without family responsibilities in the United States, would allow family life to remain comparatively unaffected without any blow to war effort. That, they urge, would help more than any other one thing to prevent the disruption of American youth in wartime.

LACK OF MANPOWER

Britain has been prevented from doing the same thing partly by sheer lack of manpower and partly by failure of the authorities to plan the distribution of manpower early in the game and scientifically.

High wages for young workers are credited with having caused just about as much wartime youthful crime in this country as any other factor. Here in Britain, this problem may be solved by limiting the amount of cash payable to workers below the age of 17 or 18 and placing the rest of the wages due them in savings accounts or war savings certificates.

British social workers, who have traditionally quarrelled with the British educational system for releasing children for work at the age of 14, suggest that the United States should maintain as many children in school as long as possible. If large numbers under 17 years old go into industry then they believe some limitation might be found desirable.

It is the fervent hope of all the British experts, who have struggled with the problem here, that the United States may escape Britain's unpleasant experience. They offer Sir Evan laboratory experiment for the benefit of the Americans and believe that it will not be disregarded.

have occurred showing a decline in discipline and a lowering of morale of the unit. During fighting positions are surrendered prematurely without good reason. In addition, arms are abandoned and wounded are left behind. While on march men singly and even in groups have been leaving the marching column without permission, abandoning their arms. Officers must put an end to this situation by all means at their disposal."

The Russians reported German massed artillery has lost its sting.

(The BBC, heard by CBS, quoted a Russian broadcast announcing the Red army had recaptured the town of Krasnograd, 60 miles southwest of Kharkov and an important junction on the Kharkov - Dnieperpetrovsk and Odessa railways. This report indicated another advance for the Russians driving westward in the Donets area toward Dnieperpetrovsk.)

The assertion that German artillery no longer was a factor in the Donets and Ukraine fighting came from Col. G. Nadysev, who said the ammunition furnished each battery had been cut down until the mass fire which usually preceded an infantry attack had been eliminated.

The midday communique announced the capture of 21 occupied places. It added that Soviet sappers at one point alone dug up 2,600 mines, left in deep snow by Germans in attempting to hold back the Russians.

Nazi Supply Ship Bombed By R.A.F. Off Norway Coast

LONDON, Feb. 9.—(CP)—A German supply vessel was bombed off the Norwegian coast Sunday in one of the R.A.F. coastal command's routine searches for enemy ships ping, the air ministry announced last night. Two aircraft were missing from the day's operations.

Typhus Deaths In Hamburg Are High

LONDON, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Soviet war news, a publication issued by the Russian embassy here, reported Sunday 960 persons died of typhus during January at the German port of Hamburg alone.

Next Year May Bring Victory Cripps States

BRISTOL, Feb. 9—(CP)—Sir Stafford Cripps, perhaps Britain's greatest expert on Russian affairs, declared in a speech Sunday that "There is every chance of Germany being defeated by this time next year."

Sir Stafford, who resigned recently as ambassador to Moscow, conditioned this forecast on whether Britons work to their full est at a sacrifice of private interests to "give Russia all the support we can."

CO-OPERATION NEED

Britain as a whole, he said, desires full co-operation and friendship with the U.S.S.R. but there are some dominated by the "old fear complex."

"Such people must not be allowed to influence our relations with Russia in a negative direction," he declared. "Either we have a partnership with Russia in the reconstruction of Europe or we plunge the world again into chaos.

"One reason I was anxious to get back to this country from Russia was to impress that urgent need upon the people of Great Britain."

Sir Stafford declared that the German spring offensive, "if it comes, will be the most critical stage of the whole war," and he declared neither Britain nor the United States can afford to fail to help Russia prepare for it.

PEACE AIMS

He emphasized the need for an immediate, "clear enunciation of our peace aims."

"It seems to me high time that some leading government of the world, and none better than the British, should give an indication in terms far more definite and precise than those of the Atlantic charter of what is going to happen if the Allies are victorious, as they will be."

In a second speech, broadcast last night, Sir Stafford warned that what he called British complacency and contrasted it with the sacrifices being made by the Russians. He forecast a Hitler drive for Caucasian oil with "a new and terrific fury planned with the meticulous care of the German mind."

"GIVEN SHORT SHRIFT"

He praised the Russians for liquidating nothing which interferes with the war effort.

"Hoarders of food, black marketeers and other saboteurs who try to take advantage of the difficult conditions of the country are given short shrift," he said. "It is difficult for Russians to understand the intrance shown in this country to these fifth columnists."

He ended his broadcast with an appeal for increased production.

"Every hour by which we can shorten the war will mean saving hundreds of lives and the suffering of millions," he said. "The cry goes all over the world, 'how long?' Each of us can give the answer through our united efforts."

cluding President Roosevelt, have said that the advanced time would contribute to the country's available electric power supply by levelling off some of the demand peaks.

One pre-war estimate was that 750,000 kilowatts of power capacity, equal to about 1,000,000 horsepower for industry, would be saved. The Federal Power Commission plans to make a detailed study in an effort to measure accurately the effect of "daylight saving" time.

There will be no immediate changes in transportation or radio schedules as a result of the new time standards. In other words, the commuters' special will pull out at 8:15 a.m. as usual, and radio programs will be aired at their regular hour as far as the clock goes, but the clocks will be showing "war time" instead of the old Standard time.

Dead Flier's War Poem Now Regarded As Epic

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(AP)—A sonnet of the air, ranked by Poet Archibald MacLeish, librarian of congress, with Rupert Brooke's "The Soldier" and John McCrae's "In Flanders Fields" of the First Great War, was published Sunday by the New York Herald Tribune.

The Herald Tribune said the author was John Gillespie Magee, Jr., 18-year-old American flier killed last Dec. 11 in action with the Royal Canadian Air Force. His sonnet, "High Flight," has been placed with "The Soldier" and "In Flander's Fields" in a newly-opened exhibition of "Poems of Faith and Freedom" at the Library of Congress.

The text follows:

HIGH FLIGHT

Oh, I have slipped the surly bonds of earth,
And danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings;
Sunward I've climbed and joined the tumbling mirth
Of sun-split clouds—and done a hundred things
You have not dreamed of—wheeled and soared and swung
High in the sunlit silence. Hov'ring there,
I've chased the shouting wind along and flung
My eager craft through fool-less hails of air.
Up, up the long delirious burning blue
I've topped the wind-swept heights with easy grace,
Where never lark, or even eagle flew;
And, while with silent, lifting mind I've trod
The high untrespassed sanctity of space,
Put out my hand, and touched the face of God.

Axis Striving To Drag Spain Into Conflict

British subjects. The explosion occurred Friday evening but was not reported until Saturday. Then a German broadcast recently declared that "the excitement among the Tangier population is great," and that "a big demonstration is scheduled to take place in the Spanish square of Tangier tonight."

Rioting broke out Saturday night with Arabs and Spaniards throwing stones into British offices and stores, damaging the British post office and breaking all the windows in the Minzah hotel.

Order was not restored until a state of siege was declared, and troops called out to patrol the streets. Quiet was reported yesterday.

Informed quarters in London Sunday said there was little doubt the bomb explosion had been "instigated by Axis agents," and had been timed to occur in the British legation instead of the quay.

There was a certain similarity between this explosion and one in the trunk of British Minister George Kendall, killing two persons and injuring 25, just as he arrived in Turkey last March from Bulgaria after relations had been severed.

Reports reaching London said the demonstrations in Tangier evidently were prearranged as some of the Arab demonstrators appeared on the scene with baskets already filled with stones.

AXIS AGENTS BUSY

The Berlin account claimed that a box broken open by the explosion contained sheafs of British propaganda, printed in Arabic, which had been prepared by the British Intelligence service to stir up the Moslems against Spanish authorities.

"Generally well - informed circles suspect that arms were also being smuggled to restless Arabs, the Germans asserted.

London sources said Sunday the Tangier demonstration was significant in view of recent reports that Axis agents were redoubling their efforts to stir unrest among Moslems throughout North Africa and the Middle East and the appearance of Rashid Ali, ousted leader of the Iran coup d'etat of last year, and of the dissident Grand Mufti of Jerusalem in Rome last week.

MARTIAL LAW NOW CONTROLS TANGIER

MADRID, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Riotous factions in Tangier were kept throttled by Spanish Morocco authorities under martial law today after the latest in a chain of mysterious, violent events.

The outburst was touched off by the explosion Friday of a time-bomb in a taxi loaded with British diplomatic baggage on a crowded Tangier pier.

Thousands of inhabitants of Tangier, in the Spanish-seized former international zone across the Strait of Gibraltar from Britain's "Rock," immediately gave vent to their ire, parading past several foreign missions and Government House with banners saying "Tangier is not at war!"

Homes For Men On Return From Active Service

By R. K. CARNEGIE

OTTAWA, Feb. 9—(CP)—When the war is over and men of Canada's fighting forces return to this country provision will be made, as far as possible, to see that they have homes of their own and steps in this direction already have been taken.

It is with that end in view, well-informed sources said Sunday night, that a bill dealing with a system of land settlement has been drafted. It will be submitted to parliament soon.

This is the measure forecast by Pensions Minister Mackenzie in the House of Commons Friday. Mr. Mackenzie is the minister responsible for preparations to deal with post-war problems.

GENEROUS MEASURE

The new measure, it is understood, will be more generous to the returned men than that passed in 1919 which, because of a number of circumstances, proved a disappointment in many instances.

The land will be purchased from present owners in most cases but it is understood the new bill will be broad enough to provide for community settlement of veterans on crown lands presently held by the provinces if such appears advantageous.

It was said care would be taken to see that those men going on farms were those who had farming experience before joining the fighting forces.

Those who have no farming experience will be helped to establish homes in suburbs where they can have small gardens and not be entirely dependent on their work in industry, it was stated.

PATROLS HIT ENEMY

British Holding Tobruk Position

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 9.—(AP)—British desert fighters holding their positions firmly before Tobruk, have thrust out patrols against the enemy in the El Mechili area south of the Gebel El Achdar ranges, headquarters said today in a communique.

Mobile columns engaged infantry and artillery forces of Field Marshal Rommel 12 miles west of Ain El Gazala, coastal point which the Axis claimed was captured Saturday.

Air forces supported the land troops again, and continued to harry the lengthened Axis communication lines.

Patrol activities near El Mechili brought that strategic desert point into the battle zone for the first time in this campaign.

Some 60 miles southwest of Derna, El Mechili is considered a key to the desert region south of the mountain zone which the Axis forces have overrun.

50 Times in 50 Years

EVERY year in the past half century, through good times and bad, the London Life has shown a growth in life insurance in force.

Last year the increase was seventy-one million dollars — by far the greatest in the Company's history. The total amount of Life Insurance in Force is now $769,214,000.

With rapid growth in size there has been an equally impressive growth in financial strength.

These achievements are the result of the high degree of public confidence enjoyed by this Company and the sound practices by which that confidence was built and is being maintained.

The Company's progress and financial strength offer increased opportunities to its representatives. We have positions available for men whose services are not required in the armed forces or who are not engaged in such industries, provided they can meet the high standards applied by the Company in its selection of representatives.

Goebbels' Lullaby

Herr Goebbels has been telling the world again how hungry and miserable and dispirited the Germans are—under Hitler. If he was doing this without the Hitler consent or instigation, the Herr Doktor would be minus his head some morning. As he has been at it for weeks and is still alive, he is of course doing it under orders. The purpose is obvious. If the Allied nations can be got to suppose that Germany is about down and out, they may ease up on their production of munitions and training of armies, and push the fighting and planning with less energy. Nothing would suit the Fuehrer's program better, hence Goebbels is set the task of singing the Allies to sleep with the supposed swan-song of Nazism.

There is little danger that the Allied governments or military leaders will be taken in by this ruse, but there is some danger that the Allied public may be more open to deception. If anywhere in the United Nations men work more slowly on munitions jobs, or grow indifferent to war funds appeals, or resent the imposition of heavy war taxes, or in any way put personal interests or wants ahead of war needs and purposes, they will be doing just what Herr Hitler and his propaganda minister want them to do.

Stripping For Action

It is not very reassuring to read that while General Percival was telling correspondents Singapore will be held, a pillar of smoke rising from burning oil tanks to the north marked the site of the great naval base, which took twenty years to build and cost $100,000,000. But neither is it cause to assume that the island fortress is doomed.

The naval base there was located on the north side of the island. It was not planned and gunned to fight land forces only a mile away, but warships up to twenty times that distance out at sea. At a range of a mile it is not so much a question of how big shells are as how many of them land on the target. Japanese artillery across the strait could exchange ten—or a hundred—shells for one with the huge guns in the bastion, and at that distance tear the bastion to pieces. It was destroyed because it was untenable in circumstances the architects had never contemplated. To them, not to the defenders, the fault belongs.

But Bataan peninsula was not fortified for defence against either sea or land attack; and it still stands after two months' battering from land and air and sea, and countless assaults by an enemy force numbered in hundreds of thousands. What MacArthur has done at Bataan, Percival may do at Singapore despite the hampering presence of a huge civilian population.

Post-War Plans

If in time of peace it is well to prepare for a prospective war, it is equally wise in time of war to prepare for the return of peace—without letting the plan-making divert attention from the business in hand. It is therefore good news that while the energies of the country are being strained to ensure victory, thought is being given at Ottawa to the conditions which may be expected to arise when the strain is relaxed—and particularly to means by which the men in our fighting forces and war industries can be helped back into normal civilian occupation.

As one measure to this end, a land settlement scheme is announced, the details to be made public shortly. The unemployment insurance system set in operation many months ago is building up funds upon which hundreds of thousands will be able to draw for support if post-war times are difficult. A compulsory saving arrangement, which would compel every farmer to lay aside part of his war-time earnings, has been frequently suggested, widely approved, and is fairly in prospect.

Not less certainly helpful would be an increase in old age pension payments and lowering of the qualifying age, since this would automatically retire a large number of aged wage-earners when their services are no longer required.

Not all these measures bear directly on the problem of re-establishing discharged soldiers, sailors and airmen. But they all relate to that problem, because the better general conditions can be made when the war ends the more easily the returning men will find places for themselves. We have the unfortunate record of the former post-war years as a warning that the time to make these preparations is before demobilization begins.

The Reserves Thrown In

The Russians are running into stiffer resistance, particularly on the central section of the long front, and in the Crimea. Heavy fighting is reported, instead of the rapid advance of a fortnight ago, and at some points the Red forces say they are even outnumbered. Their offensive has apparently not been stalled, but it has obviously been slowed down.

The Nazis, it may be assumed, intend to hold Smolensk and keep their grip on the Crimean road to the Caucasus without regard to cost. For the same reasons—the threat to Moscow and the oil fields—the Russians will undoubtedly fight with the same disregard to losses.

Some days ago Herr Hitler was reported to have made peace with his disgrunted generals; and these were said to be throwing into the fight a dozen divisions which had been held in reserve for the projected spring offensive, while the Fuehrer had gone back to Berchtesgaden to digest his chagrin and plot new blitzkriegs.

The growing opposition encountered by the Russian forces supports both these reports. That somebody other than Hitler has taken over direction of the Nazi forces seems very probable; and that enormous reinforcements of fresh men—fully equipped—have been pushed into the line is even more probable. The frost-bitten, half-starved men who had waded through snow for weeks in bitter cold did not suddenly turn about and give desperate battle to their pursuers unless reinforced by new levies of fit men; nor would they be at all likely to do it unless the generals who had formerly led them to victory had been put again in charge.

The course of events thus confirms the reports that the Nazi army which was intended to launch a new drive when spring returns to the eastern front is already engaged, and suffering the wear and tear of the mid-winter war.

—V—

Mr. Ilsley has heard rumors that some persons are threatening to "boycott" the Victory Loan because they do not approve holding a plebiscite on the question of releasing the Government from its election commitments. These parties cannot surely be numerous, and they are more likely making the plebiscite an excuse for shirking than threatening to shirk because of it.

—V—

The B.B.C. learns that Admiral Darlan has agreed to send two shiploads of supplies per week to Tunisia, to be forwarded to the Axis forces in Libya. There is circumstantial evidence that he has been sending Rommel, or allowing his Nazi bosses to send all the supplies he or they could get to Tunisian ports. A two-ship schedule would probably be a reduction in Darlan's forwarding activities.

—V—

The annual statement of the Bank of France shows the Bank "owes" Germany $1,291,600,000, and up to the end of 1941 had made advances of $2,850,140,000 to support the Nazi garrison troops quartered in the occupied half of the country. France, already robbed of its movable wealth, is now being drained of its credit and its people reduced to financial slavery for the future. The aim, thoroughly consistent with other Nazi measures, is to bankrupt France so utterly it can never again become a first-rank power.

Geneva: The great assembly of 60 nations heard the voice of an outside world clamoring for peace and disarmament. So numerous were the organizations represented they had to be divided into five groups. Representatives of women's organizations alone, with a petition bearing 8,000,000 signatures, formed a queue that stretched the length of the huge assembly hall into the corridors. Four Canadian women resident in Geneva carried the volumes of Canadian signatures. As each volume of names was laid on the table, cheers broke out. The cheers were particularly loud when the petition signed by Japanese women was presented.

Dorothy Thompson Analyzes Hitler's Most Recent Speech

Careful Study Shows Fuehrer Was Talking Arrant Nonsense, Fooling Nobody

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

In a previous column I have made a brief analysis of the most recent Hitler speech, a complete copy of which in German I finally managed to obtain from the F.C.C., through the C.O.I.

Apart from the fact that the entire speech is a self-justification and an attempt to prove that Germany, and in particular the Nazis, are not responsible for this war, the most significant passages of the speech occur at the end in the extremely brief resume which Hitler makes of the war situation, and in particular of the situation on the Eastern Front.

Dorothy Thompson

I shall quote that passage verbatim, and then shall prove by documentary evidence that it is a gross misrepresentation of the fact and that he is lying his head off.

The argument that he advances in this passage is that the Germans advanced for four months in the course of which they reached the gates of Moscow and Leningrad, and then for four months they have been held up by the winter.

According to this winter began in October, and that with the beginning of winter the Germans stopped their advance, and the Russians therefore have taken four months to make their gains.

Apologia

Hitler said:

"It was of course not easy to change the offensive war into a defensive war. And it was not Russia that forced us to the defensive but only the severity of the cold, troops who were not by nature accustomed to it cannot fight, as for instance they are fighting in certain regions, in the glowing heat of the desert. In the moment in which this difficult change was necessary I again felt it was my duty to take the responsibility upon my own shoulders. In doing so I wanted to save my soldiers even more . . . today it is the thirtieth of January, and the winter was the great hope of our eastern opponents but it will not fulfill their hopes for them.

"In the course of four months we reached the gates of Moscow and Leningrad. Four months of winter are now passed. (Please note that according to this, winter began in October.) "The enemy has gone forward a few kilometers in a few places at the cost of masses of blood and sacrifices. But in a few weeks the winter will break in the south and spring will come also in the north, the ice will melt and the land will come when the ground is again hard and dry, when the German musketeer, with his weapons can again move to the enemy. And when new weapons will stream from the homeland and we shall defeat them, and revenge those who have perished as victims of the frost alone."

October Defensive

According to this statement the Germans should have started to take the defensive in October. That is exactly what the generals proposed. The generals knew that winter was coming and the German armies should retreat to defensive positions. But Herr Hitler did not allow. This is clear from Hitler's address of October 3, in which he said, "For the last forty-eight hours an operation of gigantic proportion is again in progress which will help to smash the enemy in the east.

". . . Already the outskirts of Smolensk, we are before Leningrad and on the Black Sea. We are before the Crimea."

On October 9 Hitler—the personal press chief of Hitler—announced that the last complete Soviet armies were, (1) Locked in Leningrad and faced inescapable destruction. (2) That the southern armies of Budenny were routed. (3) That the kernel of Voroshilov's army was locked in Leningrad and were useless to stay the German drive eastward.

Step by Step

On the same day Hitler issued a statement to his troops, which had been prepared a week before but was published on October 9. In this Hitler said, "All preparations so far as human beings can foresee have been made. Step by step it has been prepared systematically to manoeuvre the opponent into such a position that we can now strike a deadly blow.

"Today begins the last great decisive battle of this year. It will hit this enemy destructively and with it the instigator of the entire war, England herself. For if we crush this opponent we also remove the last English ally on the continent.

"Thus we will free the German Reich and entire European mankind as never greater than any since the time of the Huns . . . with bated breath the blessing of the entire German homeland accompanies you during the time ahead. With the Lord's aid . . . you will bring victory."

Annihilation

It is clear from his own words that Hitler announced a Battle of Annihilation and a decision in the war before winter.

In the following weeks both the German and Russian communiques indicated that the Germans were continuing an offensive—the Germans were after decisive victory.

On October 21, the Russians were still on the defensive in Moscow and the Germans still on the offensive in the Donetz Basin.

On October 23, the Germans, still advancing, were reported to be within 37 miles of Moscow. On the Donetz Basin front they were advancing on Karkov.

On October 31, there was a revitalized assault on Moscow.

Similar reports of offensive came on October 27 and 28 from both Moscow and Berlin.

On October 29, the German high command announced the Battle of Moscow raging into the Crimean Peninsula—the advance was still going on.

On October 31, the Russians acknowledged the German claim to have broken through the Soviet defences at Tula.

On November 2, the Russians acknowledged that Russian invaders were on the Crimean capital. And on November 4, the German dispatches said that the Crimean defence force (Russian) was split and that Dunkirks were imminent at Kerch and Sevastopol.

Stalin's Speech

On November 7, with the German invaders sixty miles from Moscow, Stalin, celebrating the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Russian revolution spoke at a military review at the Red Square. He indicated that he knew exactly what his armies were planning. He said, "The German invaders are straining their last forces . . . another few months, another half year, one year maybe and Hitlerite Germany must burst under the weight of her own crimes.

"If one judges by Germany's actual position and not by the boastful assertion of German propaganda, it will not be difficult to see that the German fascist invaders are facing disaster."

But still Hitler continued the offensive.

On November 9, the Germans claimed another break through in the Crimea and local successes on other fronts.

On November 10, the Soviet reported further withdrawals in the Crimea.

On October 29, the Russians stated they had thwarted an attempt to encircle Leningrad.

Nazis Stopped

On November 12, for the first time Moscow reported that the Nazis had been stopped all along the line and that the Russians were consolidating their positions.

Now for a few days there is little change reported.

On November 15, Soviet forces crashed through the German siege lines at two points southeast of Leningrad. And on November 16, Stalin, after his visit to diplomatic efforts and a last appeal to Turkey, accompanied by threats to come in or take the consequences.

On November 16, reports indicated that when the Russian campaign was over Germany would make strong overtures for peace to Britain.

On November 19, Hitler's headquarters reported, "New and successful operations are under way on the eastern front and reports from Berlin said that with better weather Germany had opened new drives on Moscow and on the Rostov sector."

Pincers Movement

On November 21, the Russians admitted that their line northwest of Moscow was bending and the Germans intimated that they were starting a new pincers movement against Moscow based on Kalinin and Tula.

November 22, Moscow reported the heaviest German attacks thus far.

November 23, the Russians admitted Nazi gains on the Moscow front.

November 24, German sources declared that the capture of Rostov would be exploited to cut-off the Caucasus by a thrust eastward to the Caspian.

On November 25, there was announcement of a three-day conference of Axis countries to renew the anti-Comintern pact—and the suggested object was to prevent Japan from leaving the Axis as a result of talk from Washington. At that conference, no doubt, was fixed the day for the assault on Pearl Harbor.

November 26, Russian reports acknowledged that the situation of Moscow was critical.

November 27, reverses continue for the Soviet on the Russo-German front.

November 29, Germans acknowledged that their forces that were still drawing nearer to the Soviet capital had been slowed down.

For two months, therefore, after Brauchitsch had counselled retreat, the German offensive was still going on.

On November 30, Russia announced a decisive victory at the gateway to the Caucasus and the regaining of Rostov, partially admitted by Berlin.

The Russian counter-offensive began, therefore, in the south on November 30.

The Germans still declared that they were punching holes in Moscow defences. The German offensive was still going on.

On December 5, the Russians reported gains for their forces on the whole battle line from Leningrad to the Sea of Azov.

The decisive communique for the turn from an offensive to a defensive position came from Berlin on December 8, "The continuation of operations and the manner of the war's conduct in the east from now on will be dictated by winter."

Therefore both the news and the German official statements indicate that the change from an offensive to a defensive position occurred not as Hitler suggested to his followers on Friday, in October, but (after four months) in the first weeks of December. And it was this delay forced upon them by Hitler, that has brought about the disaster in the east. And now Hitler admits by distorting the facts that it was a mistake, and in his speech he now tries to tell his people that he followed the generals' advice and that the defensive position was taken in October. This is not only a lie, it is an idiotic lie, which every German communique from the front between October and December 8 denies and which successive confirms that Hitler sacrificed hundreds of thousands of German youth and brought disaster to his armies in the east in order to get the Japanese to attack Pearl Harbor.

That this is true the study of the German communiques reveals.

Actually, they show these:

The Russian campaign when Hitler spoke on January 30, had been under way for thirty-one days—four days. In that time the German armies were on the offensive in the south until November 29, or for twenty-two weeks and six days and in the north until December 3, or for twenty-three weeks and three days.

The Russian offensive in the south has lasted only eight weeks and six days and in the north eight weeks and one day.

In dividing the offensive and defensive into periods of four months each, Hitler was trying to prove that the Russian gains are small compared to what the Germans did in an equal time. But the German offensive lasted nearer six months than four, and if one wants to be pedantic the Russians still have fourteen and a half weeks to fight—over three months—until the scales can be balanced. And February, March and April are either acute winter or rivers of mud on the northern and central front.

In his speech last Friday, Hitler said the German soldiers are being defeated wholly by the frost. But on December 20, Goebbels read a proclamation for Hitler, asking for warm clothes for the soldiers, saying they were needed for an army that "after a year of the heaviest battles stands against an enemy which is superior in numbers and in material."

Therefore it is not merely a defeat by the cold but by numbers and material.

And how about the defeats in the Crimea? There is no front on the Crimea—no more than on the Italian Riviera.

Now again in his recent speech, Hitler said that the Russians have just gotten back a few villages and that even these villages are no villages but heaps of wreckage. (Es sind keine Ortschaften, es sind nur Trueummerhaufen.)

He admits that his troops have lost a great deal of ground but says that they are merely villages, in other words the villages that he spent German lives to gain. He says that merely losing ground is nothing. Spring will come.

But what did he say on December 21, about losing ground? In the proclamation that he issued after the dismissal of Brauchitsch he said to his soldiers, "After your unforgettable and unprecedented victories against the most dangerous enemy of all time our armies in the east must now change over from warfare to trench warfare because of the sudden arrival of the Russian winter. Your task will be to hold and defend until the arrival of spring what you have gained with immeasurable heroism and heavy sacrifices fighting as fanatically as before."

Note that in this statement Hitler reports that winter arrived three days before Christmas.

Now it is obvious that no trench warfare in northern Russia is possible if you begin it three days before Christmas. And it is also obvious that the stand ordered by Hitler when he accepted Brauchitsch was beyond human possibility as Brauchitsch very well knew. And this is why Hitler spoke for an hour and a half five minutes about everything except the position on the eastern front and devoted eight minutes to telling the German people that it was all planned that way, and that he really followed Brauchitsch's advice and that he never began another offensive in October.

And if we, just journalists, way over in America can see that he is talking pure nonsense and trying to explain his own mistakes that have brought mourning into hundreds of thousands of German homes, how much more clearly must the German people see?

By HAROLD L. WEIR

A curious despatch came into newspaper offices in London this morning from a correspondent of world-wide repute and proved reliability. It was duly passed by the British censors.

This despatch revealed the amazing fact that the British high command had reconciled itself to the loss of Singapore, but that the garrison had been instructed to fight to the last man so that British prestige in the Far East should not suffer through the ignominy of an evacuation.

The evacuation of Singapore, it was felt in London, would constitute a blow to British and allied prestige which should be avoided at any cost — even the cost of several tens of thousands men. It was readily agreed by most experts, said this despatch, that the situation is now so desperate that there is little hope of avoiding such a sacrifice unless, at the last moment, it is decided to evacuate the forces to neighboring Dutch islands.

Harold L. Weir

It is now generally agreed, this censored despatch pointed out, that Singapore cannot be properly defended against air attacks and, as those attacks grow in intensity, it will be impossible to withstand them.

Wearing Down

It is further believed, we are told, that the evident goal of the Japanese strategy is to wear down the large and formidable garrison of the island by incessant bombing before launching a full-scale assault.

Singapore's vulnerability to air attack, London admits, is due to lack of adequate fighter protection and the latter, in turn, is due largely to inadequacy of airdromes. The principal military defence on Singapore island already is within easy artillery range of Japanese positions across the Strait. Two important questions arise out of this despatch:

The first is, why is Japan so anxious to occupy Singapore now that circumstances have rendered that stronghold relatively unimportant in the Pacific fighting? Why do they desire to capture this bastion at all, probably with great loss of life and equipment, when a skeleton force could keep it immobilized?

The answer probably lies along the line of prestige or face.

For years, Singapore has thrust itself up out of the sea as the symbol of British might, a monument to British invincibility. To the Oriental, who thinks in symbols, the capture of that monument represents a great moral achievement.

Prestige

Japan probably regards possession of Singapore as the badge of sovereignty in Asia. When the British move out, British prestige moves down. When the Japs move in Japanese prestige moves up.

We should not forget that Japan's program makes prestige even more important than territory.

The second question arising out of this London despatch is this:

If the British high command regards Singapore as lost, what about those "overwhelming reinforcements" which are supposed to be on the way?

Late this afternoon, both Singapore and Australia began to ask those questions:

"When will these reinforcements arrive?"

"Will they ever arrive at all? Or are they just another lie calculated to keep up the spirits and hope of men who are destined to die?"

This language, you will observe, was very impolite. But no one can deny that it was very much to the point.

Air Power

The present reverses in Libya caused a good deal of comment this week. People in Britain and people in Canada asked, "How is it that Rommel, German North Africa commander for the Axis, is able to make these advances when at Christmas time his forces were badly battered and seriously weakened?"

The real answer lies in the diminished strength of the British navy in the Mediterranean. Convoys of supplies in that area has been so badly damaged by enemy aircraft that even the Italian navy can convoy supplies to North Africa with little difficulty.

The immobilization of Malta by aircraft attack, is another factor. The heavy bombings of the solitary British island off Sicily for the past month have had the effect of minimizing Malta's air and sea interference in the central Mediterranean where Axis convoys formerly had to sneak across.

Every day and in every way it is becoming more apparent that mastery of the air will decide the issue in this war. The

And Not A Dishcloth

FROM THE BRITISH INDUSTRIES BULLETIN

Housewives may well envy the great kitchens which are now part of Britain's war factories, serving substantial meals at 1/5d. and washing up in one hour 12,000 plates, cups, saucers, knives, forks and spoons without a single dishcloth.

Here is one of their meals: Scotch broth 2d; roast lamb, mint sauce and two vegetables 9d; apple tart 2½d; roll and butter 1½d; coffee 2d.

The only kitchens which prepare these meals are themselves factories in miniature, with ovens as high as 5 feet. Into one machine go the potatoes which are peeled at a speed of 56 lbs. a minute; another machine mashes the potatoes; a third rolls out the pastry for the apple tart.

When they are all cooked, the dinners go into a vast hot cabinet, 180 at a time; and 7,000 workers sit down to this good hot meal little more than ten minutes after they have knocked off work.

Anything left over is tipped into a bin and a warm spray is played over each side of a line of empty plates as they pass along a conveyor belt. The plates are then dowsed with cold water, a hot spray is turned on them and they dry at once as they meet the cold air.

And not a dishcloth is used in the washing up of the dinner for a family of 7,000 workers for the war.

Present Moisture Condition Of Prairie Lands

WESTERN CANADA PRECIPITATION MAP

SHOWING PRECIPITATION FROM AUGUST 1st TO OCTOBER 31st, 1941 AS COMPARED WITH THE AVERAGE OF 10 YEARS OR MORE

The precipitation which occurred during the recent months of August, September and October in Alberta was 107 per cent of the normal, as compared with 82 per cent last year. In Saskatchewan this past fall it was 88 per cent of the normal, as compared with 77 per cent for the previous year, and in Manitoba this year it was 168 per cent of the normal as compared with 115 per cent for the previous year. Combining the three prairie provinces together, the percentage of the normal this year is 104 per cent of normal, as compared with 83 per cent last year.

This all refers, however, to land that is in stubble and a good deal of the coarse grains will be seeded this coming spring on such land. Wheat, however, this next spring will be seeded almost exclusively on summerfallow. This summerfallowed land will contain the moisture not only of this last fall, but of the previous summer, and of the fall before that.

The present moisture condition for the prairies of such summerfallowed land for Alberta is 84 per cent of normal, for Saskatchewan 82 per cent, and for Manitoba 132 per cent. Taking the three provinces as a whole, the moisture condition of summerfallowed land is 89 per cent of the normal. This means that the wheat crop this coming spring will start under a definite moisture handicap, which means in turn that the odds are for a somewhat less than normal or average wheat yield to the acre.

An examination of the map reveals that there are large areas in Saskatchewan where considerably less than normal moisture occurred this past fall. There are also in central and southern Alberta areas deficient in fall moisture, but the map reveals that Manitoba, particularly southern and central Manitoba, enjoyed almost record-breaking fall rains.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—(AP)—The war news today intimidated buyers in the stock market but, on the other hand, brought out no urgent liquidation. Closing losses running to a point or so were widely distributed. The ticker tape loafed during most of the proceedings.

air mastery of the Mediterranean has converted what looked like a German defeat in Libya into something perilously like a victory.

Puritans

The Puritans of England received a rude jolt on Wednesday when they caused to be brought down in the House of Commons a motion to investigate the activities of the three women's war services.

This motion was the culmination of weeks of vicious gossip about what goes on in these services. Rumors flew around that the women's armies drank whisky. Some of the more prurient-minded biddies passed the word around that the immorality among these young women, my dear, was simply awful.

Succumbing at last to the insistence of the gossip-mongers—the nine spinsters of Tooley street—Major Clement Attlee, in obvious discomfort, introduced a motion that the women's services should be investigated.

Was the Commons annoyed? It was not.

Was it worried? Not at all.

The members, unanimously, leaned back in their benches and howled with laughter—a gesture in which Major Attlee himself reluctantly joined.

And now for the mail bag, briefly:

T. Thompson, Edmonton: What is the truth about the situation in Southern Ireland?

Well, the people of Eire are not friendly to Britain. But that does not mean they are friendly to Hitler. They dislike Hitler and Hitler's methods just as much as the British do. Unfortunately, their government keeps them sadly misinformed so that they appear to be much more anti-British than they actually are.

Southern Irish newspapers, for instance, are heavily censored. The Irish people did not know, for example, that American ships arriving with food, are convoyed by British planes. No mention is allowed to be made in Irish newspapers of Irishmen serving with the British amies, although many thousands of them are so serving—gallantly and well.

Civil liberties in Eire have been curtailed. Military courts have been set up that encroach on the rights of civil courts.

It is quite likely that the average Irishman does not dream that Britain really needs, in a desperate fashion, those naval bases that Senor de Valera refuses to turn over to the British.

The Irish are deliberately kept ignorant of Britain's plight in this war.

Otherwise they would undoubtedly insist upon some co-operation with her.

The truth is that Eire is in the hands of foreign gangsters whose performance does not in any way reflect the true feeling of the warm-hearted and loyal Irish people.

What Ireland needs more than anything else is the return of St. Patrick. Because the snakes are back again.

Student, University of Alberta: Why do you pronounce e-i-t-h-e-r, "eether" and n-e-i-t-h-e-r, "neether"? I have always been taught the pronunciation was "eyether" and "neyether".

This is hardly of world interest, but I include it because it is, in its way, interesting.

Before the time of George the First, e-i-t-h-e-r was always pronounced "eether" and n-e-i-t-h-e-r, "neether". That is the correct and traditional English pronounciation. George the First, however, could speak little if any English. Picking his way, gutterally, through the language, he gave to each e-i the German pronunciation, which is "eye". Hence "eyether" and "nyether". Members of the court, to be polite and to curry favor, imitated his Germanized pronunciation.

Since I have never felt called upon to flatter George the First, I stick to the traditional English "eether" and neether."

Incidentally, if anyone cares, certain of the Southern Irish people pronounce these words "ayther" and "nayther" because, in the Gaelic tongues, of which Erse is one, e-i usually is pronounced "aye."

And there you are.

"Tricolor", no address; Why do you insist on saying that Vichy government is sending equipment and foodstuffs to Germany?

Because the fact has been established both by the American department of state and by the British foreign office.

Only this week, Britain discovered that Admiral Darlan was sending two supply ships each week to the Axis forces in Africa. While the French people shiver without fuel, French coal is used to operate these ships for the benefit of Adolf Hitler.

And that ends the mail.

During the past several months, a disposition has revealed itself on the part of certain Canadians to discriminate in their treatment of the various armed forces of Canada.

This silly business started first, I am told, in the East where in the drawing rooms of Toronto it came to be considered smart to entertain certain branches of the service and to turn up patrician noses at the others.

Of course, one does not expect very much intelligence or good taste from the socialites of Toronto. I don't mean the good, solid, substantial Toronto people, of whom there are thousands, but the salon lilies, those over-fed and overmoneyed social orchids who are convinced that civilization ends at Front street and the world at the Muskoka lakes.

So when this discrimination against certain branches of the service began among these people in Toronto, no one cared very much because it was just the sort of thing they, in their simpering boorishness, would do.

But it is amazing that this nitwit snobbery should invade the West.

It is doubly amazing that it should have been taken up in democratic and fair-minded Edmonton.

And yet, such seems to be the case.

It is natural, I suppose, that we all should have personal leanings towards one or another of the branches of the service. If we have friends and relatives in the navy, we incline towards the navy. If our brothers are in the army, we have a warm feeling for the army. If we know a number of fine young fellows in the air force, naturally the air force interests us most.

But when this preference is carried to the point of discrimination, when it succeeds in affronting and wounding the feelings of those splendid young men who wear any one of His Majesty's uniforms, it is a vicious and inexcusable thing.

Yet these things have happened here.

In the matter of home entertainment, some of our Edmonton people will receive only one of the arms of the service.

There have been authenticated instances of Edmonton motorists offering lifts to men in one kind of uniform and refusing lifts to men in another kind.

This is not only ill-bred, mischievous, wanton and cruel, but it tends to destroy the sympathy that should exist between the services and to create bad feeling all around.

These young fellows who have enlisted in Canada's defence have offered to die for the rest of us. They stand between us and the savage hordes of Hitler and the mad monkey men of Japan.

We lean on them all. We owe our lives and our safety to them all—no matter what the cut and color of their uniforms.

These men are gentlemen—Canadian gentlemen—whether they wear navy, khaki or air force blue—or the overalls of the munitions or aircraft factory.

Suppose, for the sake of our own self-respect, we begin to treat them as gentlemen.

Looking them Over

By JACK KELLY

TODAY we are on the daylight saving time that this column battled for last spring and which the city council side-tracked finally without any one ever knowing just why. The so-called "fast time" is here for the duration of the war and it is likely that by the time the shooting is over folks will decide to keep it in operation throughout North America during the spring, summer and early fall months.

Apart from the saving in power needed by war industries, daylight saving time will give you an extra hour of daylight each day during spring, summer and fall for sport, relaxation or whatever your pet pastime is.

Let us say that May, June, July, August and September are the months when we can really use an extra hour of daylight in the evening in this latitude. This year will have 153 extra hours of daylight, so far as the average person is concerned, during these months. That figures out to nearly 20 full eight-hour days that have been given us for sports requiring daylight—more than you get for your full vacation.

This Is the Important Thing

MORE important still is the lesson that this continent-wide order under war pressure should impress on us.

It is a striking example of just what we can do to make life more pleasant for ourselves if we will only use our heads, co-operate with each other and forget private and picayune objections that may be raised by individuals and small groups here and there.

Why, for example, should we not make Monday morning a holiday throughout North America when peace is finally won? Any efficiency expert will tell you that our normal volume of business and industrial production can be achieved in a five-day week if we really want to do it.

If the man-hours that clerks and employees stand idle in stores and businesses waiting for business were ever totalled up for Edmonton or Canada, they would be absolutely staggering. Why not concentrate what we have to do in the least possible time and use the hours saved for real living—for getting a little enjoyment out of life before it is time to take the Sunset Trail?

The idea of breaking into the week with a Wednesday half-holiday that provides four or five hours of leisure when it is no good to any one and nothing but a nuisance in business, is something I'll never be able to see any sense in. Tack that half-day on the week-end, though, by not opening until noon on Monday and those hours immediately become workwhile to everyone and make trips possible that are not otherwise.

We Have Little To Be Proud Of

A HUNDRED years from now, probably much less, people are going to consider us of the present time among the dumbest two-legged critters that ever fussed around this world. They will find it almost unbelievable that we couldn't understand that there was absolutely no reason, except our own stubbornness and stupidity, for us to suffer poverty, work galley-slave hours and sprint to an early grave worrying about saving up a little for the future.

We have all the things needed to give us the most enjoyable life human beings have ever had on this planet. We don't have to wait even a year for them. They are here now in our possession, but we can't seem to realize it. We are like a baboon fumbling around with a radio set. He has intriguing hours of amusement within his grasp, but he doesn't know how to get at them.

In fact, we are worse than a baboon. People painstakingly tell us how we can get the fuller life we have in our hands, but we steadfastly refuse to follow their suggestions. If someone showed that baboon a few times how to get music out of the radio, he would probably be able to do it for himself . . . unless of course his first venture brought one of those caterwauling females in a personal problem program. If that happened, odds are ten to one the baboon would toss the radio away and never return to the vicinity.

It's too bad that it has to be that way, but the bitter hardships of war seem to be the only things that will pound badly-needed lessons into our heads. Personally I have no misgivings about who will eventually win the war, but I hate to think of what's ahead if we don't remember and profit by the lessons we are taking the hard way right now.

Manning Pool Beats I.T.S. To Hold Unbeaten Record

Manning Pool marked up another victory and accordingly maintained an unbeaten record for the season by upsetting the I.T.S. squad 9-7 in yesterday's Inter-Service Hockey League fixture at the Varsity rink.

Manning Pool took a 5-3 lead in the first period, Tony Hawk rapping in three counters, two unassisted and the third with the help of McDougall and Gallicano and McClosky also scoring on Main's pass.

Barrett, Beels from Dalphond and Barla from Barrett was the way the initial Training teams first period counters were marked up.

The second session was all I.T.S., Middleton chalking up a pair, one with the assistance of Cullen and Barla and Barrett accounting for the other.

The Manning Pool, however, came right back in the third canto and ran in four goals in succession.

Kennedy started things in motion at 0:25, Gallicano shared his second on McClosky's pass and the latter registered on a play with Anderson. McDougall and Hawk combined for the fourth.

I.T.S. scored at 18:40, Warrington finishing off Middleton's play.

Edmonton Bulletin Sports Editor

OUT of seven full days of curling, Cliff Manahan's Royals and Bert Robinson's "Mountaineers" from Jasper emerged as major winners as the 25th annual bonspiel of the Alberta Curling Association wound up here Sunday evening with all events completed except the Edmonton Motors, the all-city competition.

The Manahans won the Edmonton Breweries Ltd., Grand Challenge, competition on Saturday night when they handed the scarlet-hatted Schmidt rink from Millet a 13-6 defeat. They added the Gas Company to their booty on Sunday afternoon by defeating the Kemp rink 14-2. The Manahans are still alive in the Edmonton Motors, bracketed against Kemp in the fours for the right to advance into the final against Vielleux.

Bert Robinson's Jasper squad defeated Charlie Cairns' Edmonton Club rink 10-6 in the final of the King Edward Hotel competition, took the Calgary Brewing event for visitors 9-5 from Hunter of Sylvan Lake and copped the Edmonton Journal's Grand Aggregate award.

AGGREGATE WINNERS

Official aggregate standings gave Robinson 10 wins and one loss for a percentage of .909, while Manahan had seven wins and one loss for an average of .875.

Purvis, veteran contender from Crossfield, won the Bank of Montreal event with a 13-12 victory over Parm Robarts' Granite Club rink.

Harold Ritchie's Granites curled their way to victory in the Edmonton City Dairy event, beating Woodin, also of the Granite, 11-6.

OEL WINS EATON EVENT

Louis Oel from the Acme, playing for the first time in the Edmonton bonspiel, carried off first prize in the T. Eaton Co., Ltd., competition when he defeated M. Strickland's Edmonton Club rink 13-11.

The North West Brewery event was won by Harry Woodin's Granites with a 9-8 decision over the Banks rink from Forestburg.

Warmerdam Sets New Indoor Mark In Pole Vaulting

NEW YORK, Feb. 9—(AP)—Cornelius Warmerdam set the pace as two world indoor records were established and a third equalled at the Millrose A.A. games in Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Norwood Ewell, the Penn State speedster, added his name to those who have travelled nearly in :06.1, the approved world record.

Leslie MacMitchell, the New York university senior, came through with his expected victory in the Wanamaker mile, finishing in 4:11.3.

Gregg Rice, once of Notre Dame, had a friendly battle all the way with Gilbert Dodds of Boston A.A. to win the two-mile run in 8:32.8 for his 21st consecutive triumph.

Norwegian Airman Defeats Tokle For Major Ski Honors

DULUTH, Minn., Feb. 9.—(AP)—A Norwegian refugee soared off with the United States ski jumping champion in class "A" here Sunday. Ola, conqueror of defending champion Torger Tokle a week ago in the eastern tournament, turned the trick again yesterday. He carried off top honors with 203.2 points to hand Tokle the only two defeats he has suffered this season.

In second place was little Art Devlin of Lake Placid, N.Y., with 229.1 points. Tokle was third with 227.9 points. Tokle, who came to the United States from Norway four years ago, skis out of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Ola, one of three entries from the Royal Norwegian Air Force in training near Toronto, Ont., was only their given names for fear of reprisals against their families still living in Norway) won as he did a week ago—on form—because neither of his jumps was as long as Tokle's.

Ola had 191 feet on his first run and 180 on his second. Tokle made the longest jump, 194 feet, on his first try and 181 on his second. Devlin went 189 feet and 183 feet.

Stamps Wind Up Disastrous Trip

KIMBERLEY, B.C., Feb. 9.—(CP)—Kimberley Dynamiters trounced Calgary Stampeders 6-1 here Saturday night in the Albertans' final British Columbia game of the A.B.C. Senior Amateur Hockey League's regular schedule.

The defeat was the third for Stampeders in their last four-game tour of the British Columbia end of the two-province circuit. They downed Dynamiters here last Wednesday night 4-0, but dropped 9-3 and 6-3 decisions to Smoke Eaters at Trail Thursday and Friday nights.

Benny Redisky with two and Gordie Wilson, Curly Hunt, Sully Sullivan and Walter Zobrosky scored for Dynamiters. Pete Atkinson counted Calgary's lone goal.

Dynamiters held a wide margin of play in the scoreless first period and had plenty of scoring chances but each time were outgeased by Art Rice-Jones in the Calgary net.

Pete Atkinson shot Calgary into the lead at 2:30 of the second period when he whipped a knee high drive from just inside the blue line and Nash had no chance to save.

The goal was a signal for Dynamiters to start an attack that they rolled in on Rice-Jones with a shower of shots from all angles. The nimble Calgary custodian, however, turned back everything until past the midway mark in the period when the Dynamiters broke through for three goals in as many minutes.

Going into the third Stampeders started a drive but Dynamiters rolled them back into their own territory and blistered Rice-Jones with another barrage of shots that netted three more goals.

BUFFALO RALLY NARROWLY MISSES

LETHBRIDGE, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Lethbridge Maple Leafs staved off a Red Deer Buffalo rally just in time here Saturday night, and as a result add one to the victory in an A.B.C. Senior Amateur Hockey League that attracted a crowd of about 1,000 fans.

After being held on even terms by the battling Red Deer club for the full period, the Leafs broke scoreless and the second seeing each club score one goal, Leafs went ahead 4-1 with only seven minutes of the game left to play. However, Buffaloes bounced back with a brilliant rally that produced two quick goals and narrowly missed tying the score.

Dick Gray returned to the Leaf lineup for the game, and started at right wing, replacing Hec. Negrello who suffered a pair of broken ribs a week ago.

While Yanew was credited with the tying goal it was a tricky affair provided by Warshawski. The latter player let the puck go in a hard drive from the blue line and it skimmed off Yanew's stick into the net.

Goals came fast in the third period as both clubs started things moving when he carried the puck to a corner and passed out to Culley, who whipped it into the Red Deer net. Rimsted was in the penalty box at the time. Again a Lethbridge penalty back-fired on Buffaloes when with the puck go in a hard drive from the blue line and it skimmed off Yanew's stick into the net.

Milford started the Buffalo rally when he banged in a rebound from a scramble, and Greene finished things off by working in close for a scoring shot.

The last few minutes of the game were given over to a near riot as players started to swing fists. Milford and Maher drew major penalties.

Quebec Fans All Hepped Up Over Bill Reay Case

QUEBEC, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Napoleon Cote, manager of the Quebec Arena, said last night that hundreds of Quebec sport fans had signed a petition to be presented to Attorney-General Girouard this afternoon, asking him to take a hand in settling the case of Bill Reay of Winnipeg, former left-winger of the Detroit Red Wings, and now wanted by Quebec Aces.

Reay left the Red Wings at the beginning of the season, when immigration difficulties prevented him from crossing the border, and went to the Maritime Provinces where he was playing-coach for the Sydney Millionaires in the Cape Breton Hockey League for several weeks.

Finally he got a job in Quebec City and had signed to play with the Quebec Aces. However at a meeting of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, held in December, he was ordered to play for Montreal Pats.

The management of the Aces protested, but Reay settled the problem by not playing for either team. At a Q.A.H.A. meeting held Friday, the Reay case was thrown in the lap of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. No decision has been reached by the parent body.

Beverly Hears Good Reports

BEVERLY—The dozen citizens who turned out to the annual meeting of the town and school district on Saturday night listened to some of the pleasantest reading that has come their way for many a long and discouraging year. It was a story of receipts exceeding estimates, bonds outstanding against both town and school district being purchased by the town in appreciable amounts; satisfactory compromise payments that wiped out over $16,000 of back debts to various departments of the provincial government and a royalty return from the Beverly Coal Co. of $11,430.

The "fly in the ointment" proved to be the condition of both the Municipal hall where the primary grade is taught and of the town school. Both of these buildings are in need of repair.

Low Salaries For Teachers Attacked Here

More than 60 per cent of the rural teachers in Canada are rated as $600 a year employees or worse, J. H. Powell, principal of McCauley school and secretary of the salary investigation committee of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, members of the Edmonton Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon in the Macdonald hotel, Monday.

Mr. Powell is also member of a three-man provincial board in charge of post-war rehabilitation under the federal department of pensions and national health. Topic of his address was "Educating for Democracy."

Philosophy of society is given through the schools and to reach the schools it must pass through the teachers, Mr. Powell explained.

HAVE TO DO BETTER

In Canada the philosophy of society is a democratic one, and if democracy and sound reverence for what Canada stands for are to be "sold" to Canadian children, the nation will have to do better than offer 600 dollars to the teaching personnel of the rural schools of Canada, Mr. Powell warned.

C. A. Christiansen, president of the club, was in the chair.

Dangerous Driving Charge Adjourned To March Assizes

Dangerous driving charge against Henry T. Alexander, former civic employee, arising out of an accident on Whyte avenue in which Dr. Kenneth Duggan and Mrs. Duggan were injured, was adjourned until the March assizes by Mr. Justice O'Connor in supreme court Monday.

Plea of not guilty and election for trial by judge and jury was entered by Alexander. He faces also charges of failing to return to the scene of an accident and technical theft of a motor truck.

Application for the adjournment was made by Hugh Calels Macdonald, K.C., counsel for Alexander, on the ground that the accused had not sufficiently recovered from a recent illness to stand trial. Doctors' certificates to this effect were produced.

THE QUESTION

You got up an hour earlier today, you should have done so. How do you like the daylight saving plan, or do you?

THE ANSWERS

WILLIAM JANIS, shoe salesman: I don't think we'll notice much difference until the days start lengthening out. Then it's going to be kind of hard getting the habit of going to bed so soon after dark.

• • •

MRS. MARY JANIS (wife of William Janis): It will be just as hard getting my husband up in the morning as ever. I don't think it will make much difference to me.

BILL HALL, visiting farmer: It will not make much difference to me or any other farmer. For years now I've been waking the roosters up, so how can one hour make much difference.

CLARENCE MOSIER, hotel clerk: I think the plan will work out all right. It will certainly be fine for baseball teams and other sport organizations.

• • •

Arrested by R.C.M.P. officers on charge of false pretences, Arthur Tomle, Wetaskiwin, appeared before Magistrate A. I. Addresses were given by several civic and army officials and by prominent members of the Ukrainian national federation. Speakers were Mayor John W. Fry; Chief of Police A. G. Shute; Lt.-Col. R. W. Hale, M.C., officer commanding 2nd Battalion Edmonton Regiment; Capt. M. McColl; Lt. V. Swystun of Winnipeg and Red Deer; Lt. W. O. Parzeer, W. Getting Around

with Jack DeLong

Those stifled yawns and morning after looks on all faces today have legitimate alibis. As a nation we literally took Father Time by the whiskers at midnight last night and roughly jerked him 60 full minutes into the next day.

And it's all part of the big job of beating Adolf Hitler. To use an old saying we "have to get up pretty early in the morning to beat this fellow Hitler." Therefore no one can really begrudge the temporary inconvenience occasioned by the change over.

Time is a strange part of life. As an entity it actually has no existence. We can not observe it through the five senses.

It can not be seen, heard, smelled, felt or tasted. It is actually created by the human mind to account for change in the physical world around us. Those who profess to understand something of the theory of Albert Einstein like to speculate in fantastic manner on the subject of the fourth dimension. For instance if all planetary and life processes were to slow down in unison, humans would live longer in shorter time, so they contend. This may be interesting to ponder but it leaves the average person with a "so what?" feeling.

But while time is a creation of the human mind to conveniently measure the distances between movements of the solar system, it's still plenty real enough to ordinary mortals.

If you don't think so you're not out of those people who punch a clock at the office or factory every morning.

Time can also be a pretty hard master. If you don't know what we mean, ask a newspaper city editor who has a deadline to meet in 10 minutes with stories that take at least half an hour to write still unwritten.

When we're having fun time goes too fast. Show me the man with soul so dead who will ever forget the night she nestled against his shoulder and murmured with that sweetness of all yearnings: "I wish this moonlight and this night would never end."

Sometimes when we forget the passage of time there are amusing incidents. Some years ago there was the case of the postman who delivered half of his mail route before one sleepy-eyed housewife demanded why there was a mail delivery on Sunday.

But the old saying that "Time and tide wait for no man" is still a very sound philosophy.

Basic Training Centre Officer Returns North

Returning fr... a conference of basic training centre commanders at Ottawa, Maj. Louis Younger, D.S.O., M.C., was in Edmonton over the week-end.

Maj. Younger, who is officer commanding the Grande Prairie basic training establishment, left for the north on the Monday afternoon train.

While in the east he conferred with other commanders and a beneficial exchange of ideas took place.

After spending Saturday and Sunday at his home here, Maj. Younger journeyed to Camrose Monday on military business.

On Sunday he conferred with Lt. Col. Alan Elliott, acting area commandant, at No. 13A district depot.

Lt.-Col. E. Brown, M.M., area commandant here, relieved Maj. Younger at Grande Prairie during the latter's absence. Lt.-Col. Brown is expected to return here next week-end.

Nine persons joined the active army in recruiting here Saturday of 13 who applied.

Snow Affects Catch Of Fur Visitor Says

Heavy early winter snows were chiefly responsible for a large reduction in the volume of fur catch of the north areas, A. S. Hodgson, of A. S. Hodgson Ltd., mining supplies firm, said when he arrived here on an Unlied Air Service Ltd. plane at the week-end.

Mr. Hodgson said the catch will be from 60 to 75 per cent. lower this year than last. Depth of snow made it very difficult for caribou herds to dig down for feed. As a result the herds were forced to change their usual winter route and trappers have had difficulty in acquiring their meat supplies, Mr. Hodgson stated.

Frontiersmen Organizing Unit For Air Raid Precaution Work

While the possibility of enemy air raids on Edmonton is not considered likely at the present time, Lt. Col. M. S. Reynolds, commandant of the Edmonton detachment of the Legion of Frontiersmen, stressing the fact "that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", announced Monday that a move was underway to organize an auxiliary of at least 200 members to the Legion for air raid precaution police work, in the event of a bomb raid on the city.

A meeting will be held in the basement of the city police station at 8.30 p.m. Wednesday for the purpose of organizing the force and all persons interested are invited to attend.

In announcing the formation of the auxiliary, Lt. Col. Reynolds pointed out that for many years the Frontiersmen had assisted police whenever their services had been requisitioned. In the event of an air raid on Edmonton, however, while the Frontiersmen are prepared to act as auxiliary police, the large area to be covered will necessitate the enlistment of many more men.

CIRCULAR SENT

A circular has been dispatched to various organizations here requesting the names and addresses of all who might be willing to assist in the work.

"An experimental blackout will undoubtedly be held in the near future," declared the commandant, and while it will only be a rehearsal for the real thing, should it come, we want to be fully prepared."

Two-Year Term Meted Out For Break-In Count

Sentence of two years in Prince Albert penitentiary on each of four charges of breaking and entering was meted out to Kenneth Binden, 23-year-old Prince Albert man, by Magistrate A. I. Millar, K.C., in city police court Monday. The sentences will run concurrently.

Binden, who was arrested in company with a juvenile in the office of the W. W. Sales Co. store early last Monday, pleaded guilty on all counts.

The arrest and conviction of Binden terminated the first series of break-ins reported by city police this year. All occurred a week ago and the premises entered were Deliveries Ltd., Johnson's Bakery, the M. D. Muttart Lumber Co., and the W. W. Sales store, where the cuprits were apprehended.

POLISHES, CHEWS

The prisoner assumed an unusual attitude as he stood in the dock. While eating chewing gum, finger nails and chewing gum with obvious vigor, he informed His Worship that "he had recovered since being jailed and wished to start on a new life.

Magistrate Millar ordered the accused to remove the chewing gum from his mouth and remarked: "I think I told you about that the last time you were in court. You were convicted for breaking and entering and theft at Prince Albert while still a juvenile," he added, and proceeded to pass sentence of two years on each count.

In all the four robberies loot was small, nothing at all was obtained from Deliveries Ltd. From Johnson's Bakery the thieves took $1.85 in coppers and $5 worth of cakes, and from the Muttart Lumber Co., two fountain pens. When arrested in the Sales store $2 in coppers was found on the accused.

Binden and the juvenile were taken into custody by Constables Forsland and Dunlop, who searched the Sales store, while three other officers, Constables Bumstead, Black and Wheatfield, guarded the exits to the building.

The minor was dealt with by the juvenile authorities.

Daylight Time Now In Effect In This City

He hum, how did you like getting up in the middle of the night? That, instead of the weather, appeared to be the main item of conversation on the streets the first morning of the change to daylight saving time.

Possibly only an infrequent occasional has there been such a rush at shaving and getting dressed for work as there was Monday. Some openly admitted they either forgot, or for other reasons, failed to follow the extra hour for rest on Sunday night.

RUSH, RUSH, RUSH

The result was that in the morning, there was a rush to wash, a rush to the table, a rush to devour breakfast and a rush to work. Street cars and buses were crowded up to later times than usual.

Dreary-eyed office workers and business men sat in the vehicles for the first moment's rest of the morning, nervously glancing at the watch, and expressing oaths of determination not to be caught by this new man "Daylight Saving" again, if and when he reappears.

All expressed satisfaction at the thought that the worst is over and that beginning Monday evening the clock will guide them to an earlier supper and the regular hours of sleep.

Those who had made a hobby of watching the lengthening of February days by looking for the sunrise, will have to start all over again now. It will be at least 15 days before the sun will show itself in the eastern horizon under the same circumstances to the onlooker as he had been accustomed to prior to Monday's change.

Electric Light Standards Take Decided Patriotic Appearance

Light standards on Jasper avenue from 99 street to 104 street and on 101 street from Jasper to a point between 102 and 103 avenue, took on a patriotic appearance Monday morning when placards in red white and blue, bearing slogans for the forthcoming Victory Loan campaign, made their appearance on each standard.

William Muir, northern Alberta chairman of the publicity committee for the Second Victory Loan, is in charge of arrangements for the decorating.

Five slogans encouraging the purchase of bonds are inscribed alternately on the placards. These are as follows: Bonds Mean Victory; Bonds Buy Planes; Bonds Buy Tanks; Bonds Buy Guns; and Bonds Buy Ships.

During Monday the decorators expect to decorate the campaign headquarters with posters and bunting in red, while and blue. Centre of interest across the whole width of the building (former Banque Canadienne Nationale building on Jasper, just off First street) will be a horizontal "thermometer". A projectile will be set in motion as the campaign opens next week, and during its progress toward the 100 per cent objective it will first knock out of its way Signor Mussolini, who will be left on the "roadside" keeled over on his chin.

A short distance farther on, the projectile will have inflicted the same reception to "Tojo the Jap" and at the 100 per cent milestone the projectile will have completed its job by "bowling over" Herr Hitler.

Mr. Muir also announced that all advertising and decorating supplies will have reached all unit headquarters in Northern Alberta by Monday.

Florida's Gulf coastline is 674 miles long, compared to its Atlantic coastline of 472 miles.

'Hopper Pest Warning Is Issued Here

Forecasting an outbreak of grasshoppers varying from "moderate" to "severe" in the southeastern quarter of the province, the department of agriculture has issued a warning that nothing but summerfallow and new breaking should be cropped this year in infested areas.

The "egg population" is heavy and losses may be considerable if May and June should be even slightly drier than normal, it is stated.

A moderate outbreak is forecast for most of the territory lying east of a line drawn from the Montana border through Macleod, Calgary, Three Hills, Killam and Provost. Within this territory several small severe spots are indicated.

Warning against cropping land that was cropped last year is given as, owing to the late harvest last fall, little stubble was cultivated to destroy the eggs. Hoppers hatch throughout stubbled fields.

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 9—(AP)—British bombers scored hits on munition factories and submarine wharves in a raid on the naval dockyard at Salamis in Greece Saturday night, an R.A.F. communique said today. Menidi airdrome, near Athens, also was raided, as well as Bengasi and Tripoli in Libya.

A new process is being developed to make soap out of petroleum.

Dorothy Dix Says:

The other day I discussed in this column various types of men who should not marry because they are temperamentally unfit for matrimony. Many women are in the same category. They may be beautiful, intelligent and possessed of all the major and minor virtues, but matrimony is not their dish. They have no gift for wifehood. Among the women who should never marry are the career women. Most of them do, of course, and most of them have as many divorces as they have had husbands, for the perfectly logical reason that feminine career and matrimony do not mix. Each is a separate job that takes all of the brains and heart interest and energy and strength that any woman possesses, and when she tries to superimpose one on top of the other, she makes a mess of both.

Dorothy Dix

The sentimentalist should never marry. Marriage is always a failure to her because she demands the impossible of it. She expects it to be a perpetual petting party in which everything will always be romance and roses and her husband will spend his time making passionate love to her.

And when she finds out that marriage is a life sentence at hard labor, with more bills than thrills in it why, she simply can't take it.

—V—

No woman who lacks a sense of humor should ever marry, for marriage is full of such a lot of things over which one must either laugh or cry and only those who can see the funny side of family life get any fun out of it, or are agreeable to live with.

The woman who feels that she is called upon to Reform the world instead of inflicting it on some poor defenceless man who didn't know that he needed to be made over until his wife undertook the job.

The monopolistic woman who feels that she acquired a title to her husband, body and soul, along with her wedding ring, and that he has no right to have any affections or interests outside of her should never marry, because she makes a home that is a jail and neither her husband or her children ever love their jailer.

—V—

Nor should the undomestic woman ever marry, because making a comfortable home is either a bit of Heaven or a taste of the other place to a woman, according to whether she is allergic to pots and pans and the cook book or not.

McKenney On Bridge

By WM. E. McKENNEY, America's Card Authority

Modern bridge owes much of its popularity and systems of technique to a few pioneers of the game. These men studied all possible methods of playing and bidding. Many of the plays and rules they developed are still in use today.

Duplication—None vul.

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1♦	Pass
2 N.T.	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass
Opening—♣2.			9

One of the most colorful of these pioneers was Walter Wyman of Boston, a whist and auction bridge player. He wrote many articles about the game, and collaborated with Milton C. Work in the development of bidding tactics.

Probably no player ever had a greater eye for color in bridge than Walter Wyman. He would record every hand he played or saw or heard of, in which anything interesting or unusual happened, and these records were made into many colorful articles such as the last he published, on "King Plays" and "Queen Plays."

Today's hand was played in a Boston tournament and Wyman happened to be an opponent of the declarer. He noticed a fine play that would escape the ordinary observer, praised the declarer highly and showed the hand to many of his friends as an instance of foresight.

On the opening lead the ace of spades won the jack and dummy was put in with a high diamond to lead a club for the finesse of the ten. West won and led a heart, putting East in with the ace for a return of spades. The third spade was won in dummy with the king, a second club was led and the queen won.

But the ace of clubs failed to drop the king. South thereupon cashed the queen of diamonds, led the third diamond and finessed the seven-spot. Then the last top diamond was cashed and a squeeze developed. East could not hold both the king of clubs and his heart stopper. Declarer actually won ten tricks.

How was it possible for the declarer to take a finesse in diamonds after cashing the ace and queen? Because when he first led a diamond to the ace, he led the eight-spot, not the three. This play loses nothing, and remotely might be necessary to unblock for a finesse—but the average player does not think of this precaution.

Lunch Box Gang Wants Variety In Menus

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Hundreds of thousands of new lunch boxes are now being packed in Canadian homes every day for our vast industrial army. That's a sign of the times.

But an awakened sense of the part nutrition plays in our war effort is another sign of the times.

Any old thing won't do. He must have a well-chosen variety with appetite appeal. And his luncheon should be varied from day to day. For example, occasionally include a steaming hot cream soup (they hold the heat longer than clear soups) in a thermos bottle; a raw vegetable salad in an empty jelly jar.

Vary the meat sandwich from time to time, but always include no less than two hearty sandwiches for each lunch. In making sandwiches, use day-old bread and make a filling that will not soak into the bread and cause it to become soggy.

The favorite sandwich for men is cold sliced roast beef. Slice it thick, spread slices of bread with a mixture of half mayonnaise and half mustard, add a large leaf of crisp, dry lettuce, chopped pickle or pickle relish, top with the cold roast. These are the makings of a hearty meal. With the roast beef sandwich pack a bottle of cold potato salad, an orange, a pint of milk and pie.

MEAT LOAF ON RYE

Another good combination for hungry men is sliced meat loaf sandwich. Save three or four thick slices of meat loaf. Use rye bread, butter, slices of sour pickle and meat loaf. In a thermos bottle pack steaming hot cream of tomato soup. With this go three or four strips of celery, potato chips, a bottle of milk and a large slice of chocolate cake.

Mash ¼ cup bake beans; combine with 6 strips crisp bacon, crumbled. Add 1 teaspoon chili sauce and spread between slices of brown bread for one sandwich. For the second sandwich, broil a 2-inch wide meat patty and serve between slices of white bread with grated raw carrot. To round out this meal, add a whole raw tomato, a whole banana, oatmeal cookies and milk. Always broil meat for sandwiches when it is to be eaten cold. It has a better flavor and will not be covered with cold grease. Wrap sandwiches in waxed paper—empty bread wrappers help conserve paper.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Stewed dried apricots, crisp bacon, cornbread, coffee, milk.

LUNCH BOX LUNCHEON: Cream of tomato soup, roast beef sandwiches with relish, crisp celery, apple pie, coffee, milk.

DINNER: Tomato juice, beef liver stew, mashed potatoes, 8-minute cabbage, cottage pudding, chocolate sauce, coffee, milk.

What To Do

The man I am going to marry lives with his parents in a beautiful home. They have asked me to be married there rather than in my own home which is very much smaller. May I do this?

Answer—Even in the most informal weddings one formality is observed. The bride must be married in her own home, or from the home of one of her own relatives or friends, never from the home of any member of the bridegroom's family. If the bride has no home of her own, she should meet the bridegroom at the church or rectory at the hour appointed for the ceremony.

Many a bride has been tempted by the thought of using the home

Your Baby And Mine

Children, like adults, have just so much capacity for food and once this capacity is exceeded they are out of the market for food. It is almost impossible to get a child to eat all the food he is supposed to eat as a meal if the sharp edge of his appetite has been removed by between-meal piecings.

Under-weight might easily be tied up with this very habit which seems too trivial to need such serious consideration.

Yet that might seem to be all that was at fault in the regimen of this 14-months-old baby. Her mother writes, "My daughter has six teeth, weighs 23½ pounds and is as active as a flea. She has been walking since her tenth month and goes up and down stairs like a flash. She still has one bottle a day at bedtime, but drinks the rest of her milk from a cup.

"She has bacon and toast and cereal along with her milk at her morning meal, usually about 7:30. At noon she has a bowl of soup, some custard and things from the table, such as mashed potatoes and gravy and vegetables.

"In the evening she has cereal and her bottle of milk and some times a dish of cooked fruit, if we have it. Between meals she likes crackers and toast and pieces of banana. She seems dissatisfied if she doesn't get these. She doesn't seem very heavy to me because she weighed 22 pounds at one year."

The gain after the first year is very meager and because it has been so noticeable during the first 12 months, mothers are inclined to worry about it. About a half pound gain is adequate for this period.

The bottle should be abandoned now that baby has become a big girl. She is using this as a bed-time soother and instead she should eat her meal and be fed with nothing but a drink of water. Taper off that ceremony gradually by putting less and less in the bottle until there is no more milk to be had.

The piecing is probably responsible for depriving her of sufficient appetite to eat all she needs at each regular meal. It's better to provide the foods the child needs and not build up the habit of feeding her from the family table. There are excellent combinations of food, in cans, to be given the runabout, if you don't want to cook the different varieties yourself. With these choices you can always see that there is some vegetable and some fruit—such as you yourself would eat—so that baby can have it each day at the right meal.

To guide young mothers in their meal plannings, I suggest our new leaflet, "Three-Meal Schedules". If you would like to have it, send a request and a 3-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of this newspaper.

Points For Parents

By EDITH THOMAS WALLACE

Mother: "Now we're all through looking at your book, Son. You play with your blocks while I read Sister's story to her."

Mother: "It's no use, Sister. Billy won't let me read to you. We'll have to wait until he is asleep before we can read your book."

We are unfair to both children when we fail to teach a younger child that an older one is entitled to some of Mother's time and attention.

Your Figure Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

What do you suppose overweights talk about while awaiting their turn in the reducing clinics? Food. They have a keen appreciation of good food and like to talk about it, cook it, and eat it.

If you are to stay with your diet, your enjoyment of eating can't be left entirely out of the reckoning. In planning menus for you, I try to take out the calories you will miss the least. Milk is an essential food, whether or not you are reducing, and some nutritionists insist on whole milk for the Vitamin A furnished in the fat. But a pint of whole milk contains 320 calories, whereas a pint of skim milk counts only 160. The difference allows you to have a dessert. I usually specify skim milk or buttermilk, which are just as high in all the protective elements except Vitamin A, and suggest other forms of A, such as a green salad, an egg and yellow cheese, or a Vitamin A concentrate which contains no calories.

You need some fat in the reducing diet for its staying power. But the fat left in the low calorie menus should be the kind that is relished most—butter for bread and cream for coffee—instead of the fat part of the meat and fat for frying. Besides, the dairy fat furnishes protection along with the calories. You get nothing but calories from the fat part of the meat and on a very strict diet this part should be trimmed away before the meat is broiled or baked.

If sugarless coffee makes your morning too bleak, you might like to use saccharine, which is many times as sweet as sugar and contains no calories. You should try to cultivate a taste for the natural flavor of fruits. Ask your grocer about the unsweetened canned fruits on the market.

You may find that a snack between meals makes it easier for you to stick with your diet. One reducer writes enthusiastically that this is the best way to diet. She has a cup of bouillion mid-morning and mid-afternoon and a glass of hot skim milk as a nightcap. She makes the bouillion from bouillion cubes and the water saved from cooked vegetables.

Juggling the calories so as to include your favorite foods on a balanced reducing diet is quite a trick, but it can be done. And if the balanced diet has its pointe—it makes you feel so fit that you want to stay with it.

Your Dreams Tell Truth About You

Unconscious Speaks In Sleep

Smiling in her sleep. Perhaps she'll laugh at that "funny dream" when she wakes up. Or feel puzzled, or even sad.

Why do dream experiences so often haunt you? Psychologists say it's because dreams express your most secret hopes, fears and desire. Often they are warning of inner conflict which threaten your happiness.

Your ludicrous dream of finding yourself undressed on Main street probably shows you're secretly shy and self-conscious. You stand in your own light!

That terrifying drop from a high building or the top of a cliff may mean that you fear your security is threatened in some way.

On the other hand, a dream of flying airily over housetops and treetops may symbolize your relief at having broken an unhappy engagement, or resigned from an uncongenial job.

Express trains, wild animals, the sun and the moon—dreams have a picture language all their own. Read in our 32-page booklet what a famous psychologist says about the importance of dreams. Explains the meanings of many typical dreams; dream images and symbols; why some dreams "come true."

Works Of Modern Composers Feature Music Club Recital

REPRESENTATIVE writings of modern Canadian, British and United States composers were heard at the regular meeting of the Women's Musical Club on Saturday afternoon in the Masonic Temple. Within the scope of such a program, the picture of compositions by modern composers, of necessity was sketchy and more especially in the absence of orchestral contributions, wherein the moderns are heard to better advantage. However, a fair picture was presented, with vocal, violin, piano and choir numbers included.

Just how Samuel Coleridge-Taylor came to be classed as an American composer is not understood. He was born in London on August 15, 1875, the son of a doctor of medicine, a native of Sierra Leone, Africa and an English mother. However, his three works, Tambourin, Lament and Waltz, proved as attractive as ever and found a first-class champion in Jessie Mercer, one of this city's most accomplished pianists.

Miss Mercer later played Hawthorne Glade and April Morning, from the suite April Fancies, by Dr. F. J. Horwood of Toronto, and Ireland Spell by the modern British John Ireland. In all, the soloist proved herself well-equipped technically and a sympathetic interpreter of the composers' intentions.

James Richardson, tenor, espoused the cause of Deems Taylor, whose works have proved equally successful on Broadway, at the Metropolitan Opera and as played by the New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall. On this occasion, Mr. Taylor was represented by Spring in Town, Poor But Happy Home, from the suite City of Joy. Mr. Richardson was in a sympathetic mood and acquitted himself with infinite credit.

Helen Trimble, contralto; Gurney Lindskoog, violinist, and Mrs. F. Barber Smith, pianist, played the setting of Sir Philip Sidney's poem, My True Love Hath My Heart, by Jean Coulthard Adams of Vancouver. The trio combined admirably in interpreting this setting of an olden-time poem. There was balance and a judicious blending of tone which brought out the merits of both words and music admirably.

Mr. Lindskoog later appeared as violin soloist playing Fritz Kreisler's transcription of Cyril Scott's Lotus Land, Kreisler's transcription of Dawes' famous Melody and Meditation by Gordon Price, of this city. Mr. Lindskoog was in excellent form and gave all three a sympathetic, full-toned interpretation that was impressive.

Mr. Price's number was melodious and smooth-flowing, one of his best compositions to date. He was introduced to the audience following playing of the group by Mrs. Gilbert Blackstone, vice-president of the club.

Conducted by Mrs. F. Barber Smith, the First Baptist church choir sang Elgar's How Calmly the Evening and Dunhill's arrangement of The Ash Grove. The choir gave a well-rounded performance of both numbers. The blend and balance maintained was commendable and Mrs. Smith brought out the excellent writing in both numbers.

Accompanists of the afternoon were Mrs. Smith, I. Pepin Olsen and Irene Lindskoog. —I.O.

Miss Audrey Michaels Is Bride At Ceremony Saturday Afternoon

STATELY calla lillies, orange blossoms and delicate freesia formed the setting in First Presbyterian church on Saturday afternoon for a wedding of wide social interest, at which Miss Audrey Cutler Michaels of Edmonton became the bride of Mr. Dan Ripley Lovelace of Helena, Montana.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Michaels of this city and Mr. Lovelace is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Alfred Lovelace of Bozeman, Mont. Rev. J. M. Miller officiated at the hour of three o'clock.

The bride attended Wellesley College where she was a member of the Barnswallow Society, and the University of Alberta, where she was president of Pi Beta Phi fraternity. She also graduated with distinction from the Tobe Coburn School of Fashion in New York. He has been admitted to the Montana bar and is associated with the law firm of Gunn, Rasch and Gunn in Helena, Montana. He is a member of Sigma Chi fraternity and the Montana Club.

As the strains of a wedding march played by Mr. Henry Atack filled the church, the lovely bride entered on the arm of her father. She was gowned in a period gown of softest blue satin. Her frock was fashioned with a fitted bodice, long pointed sleeves, draped bodice and skirt ending in a full court train.

A full-length veil of pale blue bridal illusion net was caught to her head with a mistal crown formed of fancy glass leaves filled with air bubbles, and cascaded in soft folds into a formal train. Her only piece of jewelry was a diamond pendant. Completing her ensemble she carried a cascade bouquet of gardenias and white hyacinths.

ATTENDANTS

Reflecting the blue of the bride's gown were the ensembles of her two attendants, Mrs. Hubert Esch and Miss Marie Foley. Both gowns were made alike. Mrs. Esch's was of midnight blue and Miss Foley's or horizon blue. The frocks were fashioned with bodices of silk velvet and bouffant skirts of tulle. Each wore a single strand of pearls and halo hats of silk velvet trimmed with net pleating. Arm bouquets of baby calla lilies complemented their ensembles.

In loving memory of Mrs. Norah Baird, who passed away February 9th, 1940.

"Our lips cannot tell how we miss her,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say,
God alone knows how we miss her,
In a home that is lonesome today."
—Ever remembered by her sisters and brothers.

In loving memory of Mrs. Norah Baird, who passed away February 9th, 1940.

"There is a mother who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you went,
And I think of you daily and hourly,
But try to be brave and content.
But the tears that I shed in silence,
And breathe a sigh of regret,
For you were mine and I remember,
Though all the world forget."
—Ever remembered by Mother and Dad.

At the present time, pneumonia is one of the most widely discussed of all the respiratory diseases, because of the new system of typing which has been worked out. Broncho-pneumonia may be the result of bronchitis, representing a from-the-fact that it usually starts in the lobe of one lung. This form of pneumonia often abates through crisis; that is, there is a sudden change which occurs when danger subsides.

Pleurisy refers to an inflammation of a pleura and is accompanied by the throwing out of fluid into the pleural cavity. The patient complains of a sharp, stabbing pain which is made worse with each breath.

The fortunate fact about most diseases of the chest is that they are preventable. With proper regard for good habits of living it is generally possible to avoid them entirely.

Fresh air, out of door exercise, correct food, good posture and breathing properly will do much to build a sound, healthy chest. And after all, that is what we all want, both for ourselves and for our children.

SIDE GLANCES . . . By Galbraith

"There I was up north, perfectly happy running my own little store—until my children persuaded me to retire and come down here where I'm just miserable."

McCoy Health Service

The chest contains two of the vital organs, the lungs and the heart. The lungs are the lowest part of the breathing system which system also includes the bronchial tubes, the wind-pipe, the throat and the nose.

Each lung is enclosed in a special kind of membrane called a pleura, being arranged in such a way that the lung has plenty of room to move while the in and out movements of breathing are going on.

There are several disorders of the chest which are important, such as bronchitis, tuberculosis, pneumonia and pleurisy. Two of the symptoms commonly associated with troubles of the chest are coughing and pain. Bronchitis may occur in either an acute or chronic form and refers to an inflammation of the bronchial tubes. The characteristic symptom of bronchitis is a cough, which may be accompanied by a sense of irritation just beneath the breast bone.

Possibly the chest disorder most feared by the average person is tuberculosis. This disease develops insidiously as a rule, and in the first stage the patient may think merely that he is "run-down" and may not realize the seriousness of the situation.

The early symptoms are weakness, tiring easily, a slight cough, and perhaps a feeling of heaviness through the chest.

The patient having a tendency toward tuberculosis may bring on the disease by the practice of those faulty habits of living which produce enervation and lower resistance Improper food, lack of sleep, lack of exercise and fresh air, constipation, all of these apparently contribute toward building up the lowered resistance which will allow tuberculosis to get a good footing the patient has a predisposition toward a weakness of the lungs.

Blackout Test Being Planned For Edmonton

Edmonton will have a 5-minute modified blackout on Sunday, Feb. 15, if a recommendation by Mayor John W. Fry is accepted by city council. The blackout is being staged as part of the Second Victory loan publicity campaign and also as an experimental blackout for the newly formed Air Raid Precautions committee.

In his letter to the city council Mayor Fry stated that all necessary precautions will be taken to safeguard property, and the fullest instructions will be published as to traffic movements and other directions to citizens for the blackout.

EMPOWERED BY CHARTER

Power to stage the blackout are contained in the city's charter which empowers the city to make laws for peace, order, good government and welfare of the city.

City Solicitor T. E. Garside, K.C., intimated in a communication to the city commissioners that the city could not be liable in damages for accidents during the blackout period because council is exercising its discretionary power in a matter within its legal jurisdiction.

Will Seek Release Of Anti-Fascists

Two or possibly three members of the National Council of Democratic Rights, Edmonton branch, will attend the meeting of the national body to be held at Ottawa on February 22 next, when a petition will be submitted to the dominion government asking the release of all anti-Fascists now in internment camps.

At a meeting of the Edmonton branch held Sunday evening at the Moose Hall, James A. Macpherson, secretary of the council, asserted that Canada's war effort would be considerably assisted through the release of those now interned.

He added that while the former Communists and left wing labor adherents were doing all possible to assist in the war effort, the release of such men as I.I. Allen, Miller and Ben Swankey, both Edmontonians now in internment camp, would act as an inspiration to members of the Council of Democratic Rights.

William Irvine, Alberta Farmer-Labor Party, also addressed the meeting. Musical selections were rendered by an orchestra of the Ukrainian Aid to the Fatherland Association under the direction of Mike Badniak.

Two Axis Supply Vessels Are Sunk

LONDON, Feb. 9.—(CP)—British naval planes have torpedoed two fully loaded Axis supply ships in the central Mediterranean Friday night, the air ministry news service announced Sunday night.

Montreal Storm

MONTREAL, Feb. 9.—(CP)—Accompanied by strong winds which swept snow into drifts five feet high in many sections of Montreal and suburbs, a blinding storm swept over Montreal Saturday night and disrupted traffic, grounded airplanes and delayed buses as much as five hours.

Nazis Will Not Invade Britain Says Preacher

"There is too much glib talk about the present situation and speculation as to the outcome of current warfare, and not enough looking back to see what brought on the war," Rev. E. J. Springett, Dominion commissioner of the British Israel World Federation, declared at a meeting in Memorial hall Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Springett pointed out that there has never been a war of such proportion, encompassing the whole world before, and "this war will not end as others have done," he said.

RAPID COLLAPSE

"The war came through the rapid collapse of the old-time systems," he said. "The empirical concept of government has almost ceased, with the collapse of the Romanoff, Hohenzollern and Hapsburg thrones. Only the British throne remains and will remain," he said.

He asserted that the British throne is now stronger than it has ever been before, and that the Anglo-Saxon peoples, comprising the British Commonwealth of Nations and the people of the United States will carry on the fight to the end and to victory.

Invasion of the British isles by the Nazi forces will never occur, he said. He based his statement on predictions in the Bible, as he did his further prediction that the Anglo-Saxon peoples will go forward as the faithful servants or witnesses in a great design.

His address was the last in a series of three delivered in Memorial hall, and was heard by about 750 people.

Cabinet Talks Debt Situation This Province

Whether a new debt protective bill would be ready for introduction in the legislature this week or whether it would be necessary to extend the present moratorium, was discussed by the provincial cabinet Monday.

The one-month moratorium on debts to corporations, declared by order-in-council January 14, expires at the end of this week.

"We have not decided whether we shall have to extend the moratorium but the cabinet is meeting to discuss it," Premier William Aberhart said.

The moratorium was declared following the ruling of the Supreme Court of Canada that the Debt Adjustment Act was beyond the powers of the provincial legislature and therefore invalid.

The debate on the speech from the throne was to continue when the house opened Monday afternoon, with Hon. R. C. Gerhart, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry, leading off.

It is expected that Hon. Solon Low, provincial treasurer, will present his budget to the legislature Thursday or Friday.

Airmen In Britain Have Hockey Sport

Canadian officers and men now serving with the R.C.A.F. in England are able to enjoy hockey games, according to a report given by A. D. (Fred) Youmans, supervisor of Y.M.C.A. services at No. 3 Manning depot. Mr. Youmans received a letter this week by Ernie McEwen, "Y" supervisor for the R.C.A.F. in England, and formerly of the Technical Training School at Thomas, Alta.

Mr. McEwen reported that a rink has been leased two nights a week and four games of hockey are played each week. Canadians from a radius of 40 miles come to see the games and enjoy tea and hospitality after the game. All necessary equipment for the games are provided by the "Y" War Services

American Tanker Sunk In Daylight

LEWES, Del., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Daylight sinking of the 8,403-ton tanker China Arrow, 22nd victim of the Axis submarine drive against Atlantic coast shipping, was disclosed Sunday with the safe landing of the entire crew of 37 here.

The navy's account of the sinking said the tanker was attacked by a surfaced submarine at 11:15 a.m. Thursday "about 100 miles off the coast."

Debunker

Top thousands of years, theory after theory has attempted to explain the origin of the earth. Typical hypotheses were that it broke off from some other heavenly body; that it formed from gas which solidified; that it was an accumulation of tiny planetoids floating about in space; that it was a ball of fire which cooled off and became solid. Prof. Kirtley F. Mather, Harvard university scientist, has devoted his life to verifying or disproving these theories, and concludes, "Indeed, there are serious obstacles to the unqualified acceptance of any of the ideas that are now being entertained" (from Andrew's, "The Story of Human Error").

British Women Prove They're Weaker Sex In Name Only

ADJUSTING MOLDS FOR CONCRETE "SLEEPERS".

WHEELING IN THE CONCRETE

Manicured fingernails, hair-do, etc., are but memories today for thousands of British women, who, since war's outbreak, have been moving in on the labor front to fill the gaps left in industrial ranks by men called to the service of their country. Foremost among these labor lassies is a group of women who have been working as railroad maintenance "men." They have just taken over another job which heretofore has been considered too strenuous for women workers. With a strength born of courage and determination, they are turning out heavy concrete products such as posts, water pipes, dead-end bumpers and railroad ties. Here they are pictured going about ther duties taking their heavier tasks in stride.

British Convoy Steams Through Arctic Seas With Aid For Russian Forces

Lookouts Scan Horizon For Enemy Warcraft

Lookouts scan the waters of the far North Atlantic for enemy warcraft during convoy of Allied ships toward an Arctic Russian seaport. This "daylight" lasts but an hour a day in winter in this northern area.

Crew Catches Some Sleep—While It Can

As Arctic winds scream above decks, crew of British cruiser catches what sleep it can while escorting Allied convoy to an Arctic Russian port. Seamen sleep fully clothed, prepared for any emergency.

Decks Must Be Cleared Of Ice

There's no enemy in the offing, but still the decks must be cleared. The invader at the moment is none other than Jack Frost, who coated the deck of this British cruiser with a mantle of ice while the ship ploughed through Arctic winter on convoy duty.

Ex-Fascist Prince

Once leader of the Fascist home guard in Austria, Prince Rudiger von Starhemberg, who was also vice-chancellor of that country, is now a flight-lieutenant with the Free French forces of General Charles de Gaulle, serving in Brazzaville, called "The White Man's Graveyard." Starhemberg was a Hitler lieutenant in the unsuccessful beer hall putsch at Munich in 1923. He saw what Nazism did to Austria and is now totally opposed to everything that Hitler stands for. He is wearing Free French flying uniform here.

British Warships Shell Axis Stronghold On Mediterranean Coast

Two British battlewagons churn the waters of Mediterranean off an Axis-held port as they rain more than 200 shells into workshops, shipping and harbor works of Italian-held, sea-front stronghold.

The BRIDE CAME FORTH

By Louise Holmes

VICKY GAYLORD, planning marriage, is shopping for a compact when she is falsely accused of shoplifting. A smartly attired stranger attempts to intercede for her but is snubbed by Vicky. Her father is serving a prison term for embezzlement and she feels the pain of it worse than the loss of her car, servants and fine clothes. ANN and BILL NORTHWOOD, Vicky's best friends, call to ask her to go home with them after church next day. Meanwhile, their house guest, ERIC LATIMER, tells them of the beautiful shoplifter he saw that day. Vicky, her mind on her meeting with JIM at Windsor when she goes to see her father, prepares for church. The Northwoods, meanwhile, are urging woman-hating Eric to go with them. Seated in the choir, about to sing her solo, Vicky spots the annoying stranger, Eric, with the Northwoods. Eric ducks after church, hoping to meet Vicky. Unable to find her he returns to the Northwoods where he meets her coming down the stairs in a wedding gown, preparing to show it off to Ann. It takes his breath away but he accuses her of desecrating everything that is beautiful. Eric learns she is to marry JAMES ALBERT, and is shown Albert's picture. Eric tells Vicky that he knows Albert slightly, asks her to allow him to paint her in her wedding gown. He plans to call the picture "The Bride Came Forth." Ann finally prevails upon Vicky to pose. Eric sees his Oriental valet he should warn a beautiful girl who is headed for the rocks. Meanwhile, Vicky is preparing to visit her father.

Vicky turned in the bus seat to judge her location. Excitement swelled in her heart as it plunged up and down. A visit with Father and then—Jim.

CHAPTER VIII

VICKY was up with the sun. She hummed softly while preparing breakfast. Those trips to Windsor were remarkable in that they touched two far distant emotional points, the ecstasy of seeing Jim, the heartbreak of her father's imprisonment. With the small house in order, she dressed quickly.

A cool breeze had blown the inclement heat before it during the night and she donned a jacket dress, simple, good lines, a touch of white at neck and wrists. The brim of her off-the-face hat rolled back flatteringly. Her shoes and purse were of dark blue alligator. They had cost a pretty penny three years ago. They still had a distinctive style.

THE TRIP TO WINDSOR

Vicky hurried to the nine o'clock bus. Buying her ticket, she was greeted by the man behind the window. She responded with a cool nod. Never would she forget that first morning when she stood at the window, dazedly asking for a round trip ticket to Windsor. The same man had spoken to her then.

Walking away she had heard him say to a companion, "That's Vicky Gaylord—off to see her jailbird old man." The cruelty of it had been like a blow on her already shattered sensibilities.

Finding a seat in the bus, she settled herself for the ninety minute ride. They left the city and rolled swiftly between crowding hills. Vicky had seen those hills mantled with snow, gray and bleak, pale green with the coming of spring. Today the foliage was faded and listless. Soon it would flare with autumn colors.

The man at the ticket window had turned her thoughts back to the first dreadful journey. She had cringed in her seat, shrinking from the eyes of the passengers. Ignorant as to what she might find in Windsor she had sat without moving, her bruised heart throbbing sickeningly.

In her trembling hands she had carried gifts of love as she did today.

She had taken a taxi from the bus depot to the penitentiary, an outward calm belying her frenzied terror. Presenting her permit at the gate, she had followed a trusty to the warden's office. Blindly she had followed my instinct bidding her scream out against the thing that had happened and the price both she and her father were forced to pay.

"Right in here, Miss," the trusty said kindly. "Sit down. The warden will see you in a minute."

WAITING

She sank into a straight chair, setting her teeth to stop their chattering. Other visitors waited in the anteroom, quiet visitors, their eyes lowered. Elderly women in shabby clothes, bored men, girls in cheap finery, all staring hopelessly into the past. An air of desolation hung heavy in the room.

As Vicky waited, her soul in still agony, the trusty delivered another visitor to the room, a young man whose cheerful voice made a slash through the thick gloom.

"Thanks, old fellow," he said. "I'll do a favor for you some time."

He entered the room and it was as if a clean sweep of wind came with him. He was tall and slight, shrewd-eyed, well-groomed. He wore a small, clipped mustache. He sat down opposite Vicky.

The visitors, one by one, went into the warden's office. They came out again and were ushered down a long hall. As the minutes passed Vicky's soul would no longer remain still.

It shrieked within her. Unable to sit quietly, she rose and hastened to a barred window. The bars made burning criss-crosses on her heart and she turned her back to them. Desperate tears filled her eyes.

The shriek rose to her throat and she threw a hand, palm out, across her quivering mouth. Her frantic eyes met those of the young man. Getting to his feet, he strode swiftly to her.

"Your rouge is streaked."

"Oh." Taking a compact from her purse, she repaired the damage. "Better?" she asked, raising her face for his inspection.

"Lovely," he assured her.

As they returned to the anteroom Vicky's name was called. For a startled instant her eyes sought those of the young man for encouragement. He nodded smilingly and she went into the warden's office.

"Your name?" he asked.

"Vicky Gaylord."

"Visiting Fred Gaylord?"

"Yes, sir."

"Open your packages, please."

"But they're just—"

"Open them, please."

The magazines, portable radio and playing cards were carefully searched. "You may have half an hour," the warden said.

Vicky passed the young man in the doorway. In a low tone he said, "Company—advance." Like a true soldier she marched behind the trusty who led her to a glass enclosed visiting room. There were two wooden chairs in the tiny cubicle.

Fred Gaylord stood behind one of the chairs, hands folded over the back, knuckles showing white. The strange young man had been right. Something more than sheer panic in her father's eyes, deadly fear.

Vicky ran to him, calling "Father —Father —" she would have thrown herself into his arms, but he caught her shoulders, holding her away. His mouth was a tight, repressed line. Gently pushing her into one of the chairs, he took the other.

"How are you, Vicky?" he asked.

"Wonderful, Daddy. And you?"

"Wonderful, dear," he answered. They smiled bravely into each other's bleak eyes. He said, "I didn't think you'd come, Vicky."

"But I did—and I'll always come." She rallied her failing spirits. "Present, Daddy—look," she said.

That was the first visit to Windsor. Since then Vicky and her father had learned to laugh, to make each short moment a happy one. Thirty minutes out of a month. Precious time, not to be wasted.

Vicky turned in the bus seat to judge location by a view of the landscape. The hills were lower, flatter. Windsor was not far distant. Excitement swelled in her heart as it plunged up and down. A visit with father and then—Jim. When next she came to see father she would be Mrs. James Albert. Her heart tipped precariously, spilling thrilled joy through her being.

Service Alone Will Give Man Desired Peace

Service must take the place of selfishness, and co-operation must replace competition in the lives of individuals, and of nations if man is to find God in the home and in the councils of nations, Rev. N. J. Godkin declared Sunday at the morning service in Holy Trinity Church.

"The world is now full of self-assertion and selfishness," he said. "Men and animals fight for their own way in warfare sometimes hidden and sometimes revealed in conflagrations founded on the desire for mutual destruction."

CONTINUED TURMOIL

As the centuries roll by, history shows man plunged deeper and deeper into the turmoil of destruction, and civilization precariously based on haphazard expedients which give way at the first sign of trouble, he asserted.

"The forgetfulness and selfishness of the individual is less reprehensible than that of nations only because it is on a smaller scale," Mr. Godkin said, "but neither men nor nations will find the peace they seek until they cease to ignore those things which belong to peace. Competition and selfishness must give way to co-operation and service, if man is to find God in the home and in the councils of the nations."

BIBLE IS GUIDE

The Bible, he declared, is not "a catalogue of yea's and nay's as to what a man should do in the conduct of his affairs, but a guide to the rebuilding of a new and better world," the minister said. He urged mankind to emulate the utter unselfishness of Jesus Christ, and to make a living active faith replace the weak materialism which results in "days which are long continued struggles for existence, followed by nights of crashing bombs over the face of the earth."

SPECIAL SERVICE

Rev. J. MacBeath Miller conducted both services at First Presbyterian church. At the morning service he spoke on the life of the disciple Peter.

A special "Father and Son" service was conducted at Wesley United Church by the minister, Rev. Dr. E. H. Scragg, during the morning and at night, Edmonton girls of the C.G.I.T. took charge of a special service, marking the opening of C.G.I.T. week across Canada.

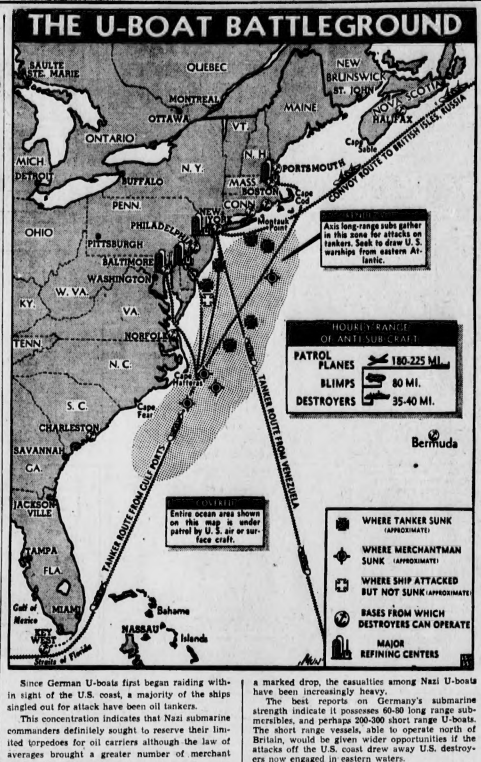

Police Station Is Occupied 10 Years

With the passing of this week-end Edmonton's new police station on 102 avenue marked its 10th anniversary. It was just a decade ago, in February, 1932, that the entire force packed up lock, stock and barrel and moved from the old headquarters building on 96 street just off Jasper avenue, to the fully modern, spacious edifice it now occupies.

The anniversary was marked without ceremony or celebration and to the men in blue it was just another day of duty. However, in the ten years since the transfer took place great strides forward have been made by practically every department of the law enforcement organization.

Ten years ago the traffic squad had only two motorcycles with which to keep a check on delinquent drivers while today the men are equipped with five highly modern machines which, along with the five prowler cars, fitted with two-way radios, ensure efficient patrol in all sections of the city.

THE U-BOAT BATTLEGROUND

Since German U-boats first began raiding within sight of the U.S. coast, a majority of the ships singled out for attack have been oil tankers.

This concentration indicates that Nazi submarine commanders definitely sought to reserve their limited torpedoes for oil carriers although the law of averages brought a greater number of merchant ships before their periscopes.

That tankers were singled out as victims—indeed, survivors report that tankers were, picked in waters thick with other vessels—indicates a new strategy of the Axis in sending their subs to the mid-Atlantic coast.

The tanker routes to the east coast from Gulf of Mexico ports constitute a vulnerable spot in U.S. economy. Truck traffic, industry and domestic heating are heavily dependent on those oil vessels. Last fall, when there was threat of rigid gas rationing after a number were diverted to British use, their importance became a matter of international common knowledge.

Axis strategy is obviously a submarine blitz on the Gulf-to-mid-Atlantic tankers, in hope of forcing U.S. navy vessels now engaged in convoying war goods to Britain to take up guarding tankers from the gulf coast to east coast industrial centres.

Since the U.S. navy began convoying on the route to Britain, submarine losses there have shown a marked drop, the casualties among Nazi U-boats have been increasingly heavy.

The best reports on Germany's submarine strength indicate it possesses 60-80 long range submersibles, and perhaps 200-300 short range U-boats. The short range vessels, able to operate north of Britain, would be given wider opportunities if the attacks off the U.S. coast drew away U.S. destroyers now engaged in eastern waters.

The Germans take a long gamble, however, in shooting their long range submarines so close to the U.S. coast. The area from Long Island to Cape Hatteras in which the heavy submarines have concentrated their attacks is within range of shore-based planes, blimps and light submarine chasers.

The obvious counter for the inshore submarine attacks is not ocean-going war vessels now engaged in convoying. Increased plane and blimp patrols—as President Roosevelt mentioned in a recent press conference—plus convoy guards of light surface craft, converted yachts and other vessels able to carry depth charges, will make the submarine attacks on the tanker routes extremely hazardous.

The U-boats have been successful to date, because no convoy or coastwise traffic were needed before. They picked off lone ships placidly steaming in waters heretofore safe. Now that the menace is in the open, counter-measures ready to hand can be expected to cope with the submarine threat without weakening the steady flow of supplies to the Allies.

Few Accidents Are Reported Over Week-End'

Traffic accidents on Edmonton streets were at a minimum over the week-end with police being called upon to investigate only three mishaps. One person, however, was slightly injured and damage to vehicles was estimated at more than $150.

Mrs. J. Scott, of 9120 113 avenue, complained of side injuries following a crash at the corner of 113 avenue and 89 street at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. Mrs. Scott, accompanied by her husband, was a passenger in a car being driven by William A. Craigie, also of 9120 113 avenue, when it was struck by an auto driven by Allan J. McCullough, 11423 89 street.

HIT REAR OF CAR

McCullough reported to police that he was proceeding east on 89 street and that when he saw the other car enter the intersection at 113 avenue, he applied his brakes but could not avoid colliding with the rear of Craigie's car. Mrs. Scott was knocked sideways by the force of the impact and complained of pain in her left side. She is, however, not thought to be seriously hurt.

Damage to the autos is expected to exceed $100.

A crash on icy streets at the intersection of 107 avenue and 97 street at 6:40 p.m. Saturday, caused approximately $100 damage to the vehicles involved.

Robert McNeilly, Namayo, told police that he was driving north on 97 street at about 25 miles an hour and that as he was crossing 107 avenue he collided with a car being driven by Robert J. Welsh, 10757 97 street, who was proceeding east. McNeilly's car, according to police reports, skidded approximately 100 feet and was most extensively wrecked in the accident.

STREET CAR HITS AUTO

A tire, fender and wheel were damaged when a street car crashed into the rear of an auto being driven by Ralph Hermansen, 10183 108 street, at 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Hermansen reported to police that he was driving north on 101 street and had stopped for the red light at 102 avenue when the mishap occurred.

City Ski Team Triumphs Over Calgary Squad

Captained by Norman Rauli, the Edmonton ski team defeated Calgary in the all-star slalom race on Mount Norquay, Banff, on Sunday, while the skiers from here took part in the various events associated with the week-end at the winter sports resort at Banff. Most returned here Monday.

Other members of the Edmonton ski team were B. Plommer, Herman Boness and R. C. Brown. The Calgary team was made up of Jack Armstrong, one of western Canada's most accomplished skiers, Connie Mackey, Bill Ross and Arthur Riley.

OFFICIAL SCORERS

Official scorers for the J. B. Cross trophy competition were J. R. "Pat" Patenaude, president of the Northern Alberta Ski Zone, who was also in charge of the ski train from Edmonton; Larry Olsen, president of the Calgary Ski club, and Miss Ethyl Knight, secretary - treasurer of the Rocky Mountain Ski Zone.

The party from Edmonton left the city Saturday night, breakfasted in Calgary and arrived in Banff in the forenoon, for a day's skiing, and boarded the train at 9 p.m. for the trip home.

Edmonton's carnival queen, Miss Aileen Johnstone presided on the train.

Misplaced Hat Causes Mishap

Because a woman passenger in a taxi misplaced her hat, Charles Ecker, 10125 97 avenue, the driver, crashed the vehicle into a post in the centre of the intersection of 107 street and Jasper Avenue at 5:10 a.m. Monday, causing considerable damage.

Ecker told police that he was just pulling away from a downtown cafe with two ladies and when one asked if she had left her hat on the front seat, he glanced down to find out and in so doing failed to see the post.

It was necessary to summon a second taxi in order to transport the fares to their destination.

Farmers' Union Planning Drive For Membership

Plans and preparations for launching an intense membership and educational drive among Alberta farmers, were discussed Saturday by the board of directors of the Alberta Farmers' Union (formerly the United Farmers of Canada, Alberta section) at their first meeting since changing a charter under the new name.

In accordance with the wishes of the joint meeting of delegates of the U.F.A. and U.F.C. at their annual conventions in January, the board of directors of the former U.F.C. have applied for, and received a charter to carry on as the Alberta Farmers' Union.

MEMBERSHIP GROWS

Revision of the constitution and implementation of other minor changes necessary to bring about complete autonomy under the new name, were among the items brought before the board for study and consideration. All changes that require the confidence of the general membership will be placed before the general body at a special meeting of the membership, to be announced at a later date.

In the meantime the membership is increasing at the rate of 75 per day, and the board of directors is planning an intensive educational campaign and membership drive among the farmers of the province.

All 17 members of the board were present with Chester McGowan, Hairy Hill, chairman of the board, and William Logan, Holden, vice-chairman, alternating as chairman of the two-day meeting.

5 Children Burn To Death When Home Destroyed

MARKHAM, Ont., Feb. 9—(CP)—Five children burned to death here early Sunday when fire, believed to have started from an overheated furnace, swept through a two-storey frame dwelling occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Nick Schouten and their family of six.

The youngest child, one-year-old Patricia, was saved by Mrs. Schouten as she and her husband ran from the burning building.

Ukrainians Of City Urge Men To Join Army

land in Europe know what it means to suffer through loss of democratic freedoms, and appealed to them to do for Canada what their forefathers have been doing for generations in an attempt to acquire the type of freedom in the Ukraine that is enjoyed in Canada.

"Any able-bodied young man should be ashamed of wearing civilian clothing at this critical stage of the war," he said. "The freedom we are enjoying in Canada is too precious to be lost through complacency on our part," Mr. Kupchenko added.

Mayor Fry appealed to those who could not help by enlisting to get behind the Ukrainian Canadian Victory Loan, and raise sufficient funds to see that the fighting forces were well equipped.

PROUD OF PLATOON

Lt.-Col. Hale paid tribute to the many boys of Ukrainian extraction in khaki or air force blue who have already distinguished themselves in the present conflict. He marvelled at the spirit shown by the Ukrainians in their fight for democratic rights through the centuries.

"We are proud of your platoon and only hope that more men of such fine calibre will join," he said.

The Ukrainian people are making a magnificent stand against Hitler, Chief Constable Shute stated in his remarks. He appealed to those present to subscribe to the Second Victory Loan.

Hitler has finally realized what the Russians and Ukrainians can do. Canadians can do likewise when their turn comes, Capt. M. B. McColl told the gathering amid applause.

APPEALS TO YOUTH

Lt. Swystun, whose father was one of the founders of the Ukrainian National Federation, appealed to the young men to join immediately. "We can no longer afford to be too late," he said.

"We know what it means to lose freedom. I appeal to you to join at least the reserve, forces if you cannot at present join for active service," W. Kossar, Saskatoon, president of the National Ukrainian Federation, stated.

William Derosh, staff member of the Dominion-provincial youth program, stated that the only
